PREFACE

REVIEWING an earlier volume of the Summary Catalogue, Sir George Warner spoke of the 'bewildering multiplicity of Bodleian nomenclature'. In the introduction to the present volume I have attempted to write an historical guide to the tangle, to trace the growth of methods of classification and to record what is known of the many catalogues of manuscripts in use in the Library during its long history. The subject is technical, and few users of the Summary or Quarto Catalogues will wish to master all its complexities; but every student of manuscripts knows well how important a knowledge of early shelf-marks and catalogues can be for critical purposes. It is, moreover, fitting that the work of earlier scholars who have laboured to make the contents of our collections available to others should be commemorated. For this introduction, in addition to the abundant records of the Library and the works of W. D. Macray and G. W. Wheeler, I have been able to draw on the unpublished notes and lists of Falconer Madan and Sir Edmund Craster. I am further much in debt to Sir Edmund Craster for his help and encouragement.

The first set of tables, the conspectus of shelf-marks, is arranged in two series, obsolete and current. In the series of obsolete shelf-marks the earliest included are those given in the 1697 Catalogue. To have included earlier shelf-marks would have unduly increased the size of the volume without gain to the users of it. The lists are available in the Library. Both tables were finally prepared for the press by P. Long, assistant in the Department.

The second set of tables is a list of the manuscripts acquired between the founding of the Library and 1695 in order of acquisition. The order number was printed in part i of vol. II in small type after the running number. It was therefore impossible to make the few necessary changes except by means of cross reference. In the index to this list an attempt has been made to identify some of the donors more precisely than was done in the body of the Catalogue. It will be seen that already in the seventeenth century it was to alumni of the University that the Library owed the greatest number of gifts. I have to thank Mr. N. R. Ker for valuable suggestions and corrections.

The final table shows the year dates which are written on most of the Laudian manuscripts. Its purpose is explained in the introductory note to the section.

In conclusion an apology is due to users of the Summary Catalogue for the long delay in producing the two final volumes.

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY

I. CLASSIFICATION AND ARRANGEMENT OF MANUSCRIPTS

WHEN the Bodleian Library was opened to readers on 8 November 1602, it resembled a library of the later Middle Ages, in the sense that printed books and manuscripts were chained side by side. This was the deliberate policy of the founder, Sir Thomas Bodley. The first Librarian, Thomas James, wished to place printed books and manuscripts in separate series. Bodley disagreed and set out his view in a letter to James:¹

As for your proposal, to have them [i.e. the manuscripts] cheined upon shelves by them selves, that will come to one purpose, as if they were cheined mixtly with the rest. For the opportunitie of embezeling, will be in a maner as ready that way as the other. As withall I hold opinion, that among the printed, there will be very many, not much lesse to be respected, then som of your rarer manuscriptes. And therfor my opinion is still, that they should be cheined as the rest, reserving onely the most singular and rare for your closets or the grates, and committing all the rest, to the trust which we must repose in mens othes, and consciences.

The manuscripts were accordingly arranged in the same alphabetical series as the printed books under the faculties of theology, law, medicine, and arts, with the exception of a few kept in the cupboards ('closets' or 'grates'), known also by their Latin names, 'Arch(iva)'.² The defect of this system was that shelf-marks had to be changed with some frequency, if the alphabetical order was to be kept as new accessions came in. Thus the first manuscript acquired for the Library, Antonio Pereira's *Libro da sanctificação . . . do glorioso sã Joham Baptista*³ was moved from P 2. 6. Th. to P 9. 15. Th. by 1620.

² Cf. ibid. p. 90: 'I pray yow differre the cheining of the Greeke MS. till yow and I meete: for that some may be cheined, and others not yet printed, kept in safer custody.'

³ MS. Bodl. 855 (S.C. 2616); it was the gift of Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex, in 1600, part of the spoils of his Cadiz expedition. See B.Q.R. ii. 83, iii. 239-41.

James remained unconvinced by Bodley's arguments, and renewed his request again in 1611.¹ The building of Arts End was in progress, and its completion was bound to make necessary a considerable rearrangement of books. Whether Bodley agreed that a separation was now the better plan, we do not know; but soon after his death (Jan. 1613), the manuscripts were taken up into the gallery at the west end of the Library, which had just been emptied by the removal of the quartos and octavos to the galleries in the newly built Arts End.

The incident is recorded in a paper written by Brian Twyne 'Touching y^e placinge of y^e MS in y^e publike Library'.² Twyne was a reader of the manuscripts (according to James, he and Thomas Allen were the only readers of them), and had protested at a meeting of the Visitors (later known as the Curators) in Jan. 1613. He asked that the 'Visitors' should take order by their power y^t y^e MSS may be reduced into their former order and places, which I hold to be y^e best way (under their censures) or else into some other place in y^e old or newe library in y^e lower roome (and not in y^e galleries), where they may stand altogether for y^e free use and accesse of all men, as hitherto they have done without this causelesse and unnecessary innovation.

James claimed that he had already secured the consent of the Visitors, but in face of this protest 'yeelded, after longe resistance, and removed y^e MSS to their former places'. In the Catalogue of 1620 the manuscripts appear once more 'mixtim alphabetical wise' with printed books, and the same is true of the appendix of 1635.

The principle of the separation of manuscripts was established under James's successor John Rous (1620-52). When more room was needed on the open shelves, some manuscripts were sorted out from the folio printed books and referenced as MS. Med. The full title in the earliest hand-list is: Libri MS ex inferioribus classibus in superiorem classem medicam translati. This presumably refers to the section of quarto and octavo medical books in the gallery in Arts End. The exact date when this series of manuscripts was started cannot be ascertained, but it was before 1629,¹ and the series had reached at least 112 by 1634.² At a later period of Rous's time of office they were moved into cupboards underneath the gallery in Arts End, above the 'Arts' printed books. In the 1697 Catalogue they appear as Super D 1. Art, Supra M 4 Art (nos. 2600–2742).

Two other collections of miscellaneous manuscripts were kept in similar cupboards and known as MS. Th. and MS. Art. The names do not refer to the contents of the collections, but to their position in the Library, above the Arts books and below the Theology quartos and octavos in the gallery above.³

MS. Th. consists entirely of manuscripts weeded out from among the chained folios, except two volumes which are gifts of the years 1634 (S.C. 2754) and c. 1639 (S.C. 2752). In the 1697 Catalogue these manuscripts are referenced Supra N 2 Art., Super O 1 Art., Supra P 3 Art. (nos. 2744⁴–83).

MS. Art. was numbered as a series by Gerard Langbaine, c. 1646, but the manuscripts had probably been together by then in their cupboards (Super A, B Art.) for some time. They consisted of folios which had not been in fit condition to be chained on the open shelves, and of volumes which had been borrowed by Thomas James, for his work on the texts of the Fathers, from other libraries, and not returned. The great majority were acquired during James's term of office. Only two are known to have come in later.⁵ In the 1697 Catalogue they are Supra A, &c. Art. (nos. 2496–2599).⁶

These manuscripts were referenced 'MSS. Bodley' in the middle of the eighteenth century.

The arrival of the first large gifts of manuscripts, Roe (1628), Barocci (1629), Digby (1634), and Laud (1635–40), which were all kept as separate collections known by their names,⁷ no doubt ¹ MSS. Med. 7, 16 are so cited in the MS. Cat. of Hebrew books made by H. Jacob in 1629, for which see G. W. Wheeler, B.Q.R. iii. 144–6.

² Med. 34 and 112 are so cited in the 1635 Appendix to the 1620 Catalogue, s. vv. Vitae and Homiliae.

⁶ The heading was accidentally omitted in the body of the 1697 Catalogue, p. 129, but appears in the list of contents, p. *2.

⁷ The Laudian manuscripts were sometimes known as MSS. Cant(uarienses).

confirmed the practice of separating manuscripts and printed books. The completion of the extension at the western end of the Library (now known as the 'Selden End') by 1640 made it possible to shelve these manuscripts together. The Roe, Barocchi, Digby, and Laud collections were moved into the Selden gallery in 1640–1.¹ The opportunity was taken of renumbering all these collections, and in this work Gerard Langbaine took a large share. From the Library accounts for 1643² there is an item of £1 'to buy a French standish to present Mr. Langbaine for his paines about my Lord Steward's Gr. MSS.', i.e. the Barocchi collection given by the earl of Pembroke.

In one of the copies of Peter Turner's catalogue of the Barocchi manuscripts (MS. Barocchi 243, part iii) the present numbers are entered in the hand of Langbaine, who also added the numbers in one of the official copies of the catalogue of the Digby collection (MS. Digby 234^b). Moreover, his hand is to be seen in the titles prefixed to many of the manuscripts. The numeration of these collections has not been changed since. From the elaborate concordance tables (antistoichiae) of Laudian manuscripts in his notebooks³ it appears that Langbaine had some part in the arrangement of this series also, at any rate in checking the new numbers against the original lists. The Laudian manuscripts were arranged in eleven series, lettered A–L, each volume being designated by letter and running number, e.g. A 1. This numeration continued to be used until a part of the collection was removed to the Auctarium in 1789.

There still remained many manuscripts among the chained printed folios and among the printed quartos and octavos in the galleries in Arts End. These were sorted out a little later and moved to the gallery in the New End with the main manuscript collections. The first list of them in their new home is at the end of the Entry Book for 1648–9, and this is probably the date at which they were referenced. They were arranged in cases marked A–F, and carried the case-letter, shelf-number, and number of order on the shelf, e.g. A 1. 1. To this, later in the century, was prefixed NE, usually in the form of a monogram, standing for New End.⁴ This is the shelf-mark given to Nos. 1840–2495 in the 1697 Catalogue, and it continued to be used until the middle of the eighteenth century, when these manuscripts were re-referenced 'MSS. Bodley'.

The cupboards (Archiva) were two, lettered A and B,¹ standing for australe and boreale. They came to be used principally for manuscripts which could not be put on the ordinary shelves, such as rolls, Oriental manuscripts, and Chinese books. They also housed a few specially precious manuscripts and printed books. They are Nos. 2784–3126 in the 1697 Catalogue. The Western manuscripts among them were re-referenced MSS. Bodley in the middle of the eighteenth century.

We have a list of the sections in the Library, which was drawn up by Gerard Langbaine, 1651–2.² He divided the manuscripts into twenty equal parts for the purposes of his scheme for a co-operative catalogue.³ The list is as follows:

In 1655 Thomas Barlow (Librarian, 1652–60) formed the class in Musaeo, i.e. manuscripts kept in a cupboard in the Librarian's study.¹ In this class were mainly placed the miscellaneous donations and purchases of the period c. 1647–83.² The shelf-mark is still retained in the form e Musaeo, but the numeration was altered in 1728. The remaining acquisitions up to the time of the 1697 Catalogue were all referenced with the name of the collector, although some of them were very small. They are Selden (1659), Hatton donat. (1669, 1688), Hatton (1671), Casaubon and Langbaine (1671), Fairfax (1673), James (1678), Junius (1678), Marshall (1685), Dugdale (1686), Fell (1686), Wood empt. (1690), Barlow (1691), Wood donat. (1696).

II. CATALOGUES

(i) Thomas James

Thomas James had originally thought of a separate catalogue of manuscripts, for in the preface to the second part of his catalogue of the manuscripts in the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge (Ecloga Oxonio-Cantabrigiensis), dated July 1600, after the Keepership of the Public Library had been offered to him, he promised that if the manuscripts there prove, as he fully expects ¹ In the Library Accounts for 1556 is the entry of 13s. 6d. for 54 feet of boards for shelves in Mr. Barlow's study.

² The original fonds was Nos. 1–120 (S.C. 3491–3586, 276–299). MSS. 97–120 are the Greek manuscripts given by Oliver Cromwell, the origin of which is obscured in the 1697 Cat.; Nos. 121–68 (3587–3634) were added in 1656–60; Nos. 169–266 (3635–3732) were added in 1665–83; Nos. 267–71 (3733–7) were added c. 1690.

they will, sufficiently numerous, he will publish a special catalogue of them.¹ Defeated by Bodley over the physical separation of manuscripts, he never made this special catalogue. The first printed catalogue, which appeared in 1605, was arranged by shelves, section by section. The manuscript which we have already taken to illustrate the system of classification is described in the Theology section as follows:²

The second catalogue (1620, with appendix 1635) was arranged alphabetically by authors. The entries of manuscripts were very brief and do not list the complete contents; for instance under Augustinus, there is an entry: *Opuscula varia MS. G. 8. 8.*³ There is a long heading 'Anonymi Scriptores varii MS.', in which the opening words of the tracts are given, for instance:⁴

Anon. cui Pr. Phoebus Phoebe, MS. A 3. 13. [Art.] Anon. MS. Pr. Ex agro veteri A. 3. 13 [Art.]

These are the first two pieces in what is now MS. Auct. F. 1. 17 (S.C. 2506), and besides these two pieces (the Liber parabolarum of Alan of Lille and the Tobias of Matthew of Vendôme), the manuscript contains Vergil, Eclogues, Georgics, and Aeneid, Appendix Vergiliana, Geoffrey of Vinsauf, Poetria nova, poems of Ovid, Sedulius, Carmen paschale, and Prudentius, Psychomachia. All these other works are entered under the names of their authors, except the Poetria nova. Twyne observed that

Mr. James knoweth very well, that there are many Manuscripts in y^e Library y^e authors and titles whereof, he himself knoweth not; as for example, he would never have put downe in his catalogue a certaine treatise in y^e Library, by y^e name of Author Algorismi or Algorismus if he had knowen at y^e first, that, Jo: de Sacrobosco had beene y^e Author thereof, as it plainly appeareth out of y^e wordes of y^e treatise itself.⁵

But it would be quite unjust to censure James for not cataloguing manuscripts in greater detail. He was regarded as a leading expert on them. He set on foot a considerable scheme for collating manuscripts of works of Saints Ambrose, Cyprian, and

Gregory the Great,¹ and in his controversial works made more extensive use of them than other writers of the day. Thus he writes in his Manuduction:²

By that time we have gone over all the unprinted Manuscript Copies in both Universities, the famous Librarie of sir Robert Cotton, and other private libraries, is there not great hope of much good to bee done for the publike benefit of the Church? If I had but half a dozen of such as I know, that are both willing and able: for pittie let not the Jesuite upbraide us any longer with his nemo eos conduxit, for want of due encouragement and imployment in this sacred and weightie businesse. As Librarian James had other and more pressing tasks of cataloguing.

Though Rous separated the manuscripts physically from the printed books, he did not abandon the practice of cataloguing them together. In the appendix to the 1620 Catalogue, which appeared in 1635, a small number of manuscripts were entered, but not the Barocci, Roe, or Digby collections. As we shall see, they had their own separate catalogues. Miscellaneous accessions of manuscripts continued to be entered in an interleaved copy of the 1620 Catalogue by Rous and by his successor Barlow.

(ii) The early collections of Manuscripts

The Barocci, Digby, and Laud collections arrived with catalogues ready made. The Greek manuscripts, the class most eagerly sought after by the scholars of the first half of the seventeenth century, were marked out for favoured treatment. A catalogue of the Barocci collection had been published at Venice in 1618.³ Laud, however, commissioned Patrick Young, keeper of the King's library, and Dr. Augustine Lindsell, then dean of Lichfield, to make a fuller catalogue, which was to include also the manuscripts given by Sir Thomas Roe. Their catalogue (now the first part of MS. Barocci 243) was finished on 31 March 1629, just before the manuscripts were sent to Oxford. It is in a copyist's hand except for the Greek incipits which were inserted by Young, and it contains annotations made subsequently by Dr. Peter Turner, Fellow of Merton.⁴ It was quickly superseded, for on 13 February 1629/30, the earl of Pembroke, who had found the money for the purchase of the Barocci collection, wrote to the University asking that leave should be given to Turner to borrow the Barocci manuscripts for the purpose of making a catalogue.¹ There are two copies of Turner's catalogue, both autograph, MS. Barocci 243 (part ii) and AA 1 Med. Seld. It includes the Roe as well as the Barocci collection. In 1643² Edmund Chilmead, chaplain of Christ Church, was employed to make an alphabetical index of authors. The autograph of his index has survived in MS. Barocci 244.

The catalogue that came with the collection of Sir Kenelm Digby (MS. Digby 234^a) is mentioned by Laud in the following letter to Convocation (19 December 1634):³

These manuscripts (many of them being very good) he [sc. Digby] hath been at the charge to bind up, and put his arms fair upon them, . . . with these he hath sent a catalogue, but that (as he himself tells me) is somewhat imperfect, his man being indisposed for health at the time when he made it and whether the method of it will like you, or fit the university, I know not, but after the books are compared with this, it will be very easy to make a perfect one by it.

In spite of these tactful criticisms, the catalogue was adopted for use. In 1635 5s. were paid 'for transcribing the catalogue of Sir Kellam Digbye's MSS. for the use of the Librarie'. This copy (MS. Digby 234^b) has the present numbers entered in the handwriting of Gerard Langbaine with a table of concordance to the original numbers.

Like the Digby collection the manuscripts of Archbishop Laud came bound with 'his arms fair upon them', and seemingly provided with catalogues. There were three main instalments of his gifts, in 1635, 1636, 1639, and a smaller one in 1640.⁴ MS. Laud misc. 705 contains a copy of the catalogue of the first and second donations, each separately. MS. Laud misc. 692 contains the first three donations with shelf-marks added in red. MS. Laud misc. 556 contains all four donations, each arranged in separate alphabetical series, according to language, first the Western manuscripts: Anglici, Gallici, Hibernici, Italici, Latini, Russici, Saxonici, and then the Oriental: Arabici, Armenici, Chaldaici, Chinenses, Graeci. Within each section the four donations are again kept separate. This was for some time the official catalogue. Barlow added a copy of Laud's letter on the conditions governing the gift, and corrected the descriptions here and there. Such an arrangement in four alphabets would have been inconvenient to use, and Gerard Langbaine combined the four donations into one alphabet.

(iii) Gerard Langbaine

The next stage in cataloguing the manuscripts was the work, not of a member of the Library staff, but of Gerard Langbaine (1609–58), Fellow (1633) and Provost (1646) of Queen's College. None of Langbaine's work was published or even made generally available in the Library during his lifetime, but fortunately a series of his notebooks was purchased by the Library at his death, and more, 'found among the offall collections' of Bishop Barlow,¹ were given by Anthony Wood in 1695. There are references in his notebooks to papers which are not in the existing series,² but it appears that all his most important work as cataloguer has survived.

Langbaine concerned himself not only with Bodleian manuscripts, but also with those in college libraries. His method was to make a copy of the current catalogue, and then correct and elaborate it afterwards. The main lists and catalogues found in his notebooks are as follows:

Barocci and Roe

Abbreviated copy of P. Turner's catalogue, MS. Langbaine 19, pp. 161–246, 251–66; copy of Chilmead's alphabetical index, partly in a clerk's hand, MS. Langbaine 7, pp. 15–148; full descriptions of 38 Barocci MSS. in MS. Langbaine 10, pp. 1–354, and others scattered through his notes.

Cromwell

Full descriptions, MS. Langbaine 10, pp. 355–500.

¹ Descriptions of them by Coxe are in vol. i of the Quarto Catalogues, col. 877–88. Nos. 1–21 form the original series; nos. 22–30 are MSS. Wood donat. 1–9. Hearne has a characteristic, and perhaps true, account of the way Wood acquired these volumes, Collections, ii. 44.

² At the end of a very full description of MS. C.C.C. 157 (Marianus Scotus) in MS. Wood donat. 2, p. 145, he adds: 'Quae inde historica excerpsimus vid: in schedis nostris . . . in f^o.' Cf. Hearne, Collections, i, 111. Wood kept a few papers; see Wood's Life and Times, ed. A. Clark, Oxford Hist. Soc. xix, 1891, i. 248.

Digby¹

MS. Langbaine 19, pp. 455-571 contains a copy of the official catalogue (MS. Digby 234^a) with Bodleian numbers entered and with concordance tables. Catalogus alphabeticus auctorum et tractatum, MS. Langbaine 4, pp. 429-545.

Full descriptions of a number of MSS. are found in the notebooks, especially MSS. Langbaine 4, 18.

Laud

MS. Langbaine 7,² pp. 155-248 contains a copy in the hand of an amanuensis, with corrections by Langbaine, of the official catalogue (MS. Laud misc. 556). A running number³ is prefixed to each MS. On the basis of this copy Langbaine made two concordance tables, from the shelf-marks to the running number and vice versa, MS. Langbaine 1. The resulting dubia, MSS. unaccounted for, are dealt with in MS. Wood donat. 5, pp. 1-8. Langbaine also made a single alphabetical series by languages of the four series of the official catalogue. The earlier draft is in MS. Wood donat. 3, pp. 74-430, the fair copy is MS. Langbaine 1. Some preliminary matter, which should have gone into MS. Langbaine 1, and some reject leaves are in MS. Wood donat. 5, pp. 9-24.

The bare enumeration of these lists and catalogues is enough to show the comprehensiveness of Langbaine's work on the collections of manuscripts in Oxford. Both for the Bodleian and for college libraries his notebooks comprised copies of all existing lists or catalogues,¹ and in addition he himself made full descriptions of a very considerable number of manuscripts. Among colleges the most important are the catalogues of Balliol and Oriel;² in the Bodleian series the fullest are the descriptions of the long series of the early miscellaneous acquisitions, now known as MSS. Bodley and MSS. Auct., and of Greek manuscripts. These full descriptions are still of value. For the colleges his work is incomplete. Some collections are not represented at all, others, such as Lincoln and All Souls, only by a small part of the manuscripts they then possessed. When he had a copy of an existing catalogue, as at New College and Magdalen, he supplemented it by personal inspection of the collection. For the Bodleian he made more elaborate and careful concordance tables of the alterations in shelf-marks than any to be found in the official records of the Library.

A detailed chronology of Langbaine's work on manuscripts is impossible. He very rarely dated his notes. A fixed point is his letter to John Selden, dated 16 March 1651/2.³

Most Hon.^d Sir,

Having the opportunity of this bearer, Mr. Patrick Young I presume to trouble yow: (as I have done so often with impunity that I begin to think I may do it lawfully.) Mr. Pocock intends shortly to publish some pieces of Maimonides in Arabick, with his translation. For myself, I have engaged a matter of a score of our ablest men in that kind, to undertake a thorough Survey of our Publick Library, intending to make a perfect Catalogue of all the books according to their Severall Subjects in severall kinds; and when that's done to incorporate in it all the Authors in any of our private College Libraries, which are wanting in the Public, so as he that desires to know, may see at one view, what we have upon any subject, Dr. James made some beginnings in this kind; but none yet has ventur'd either to perfect his or begin anew. His Successor Mr. Rouse, I fear, and so doe his Physicians, will not be long liv'd. Sir Thomas Bodley requires a single man for the place; and my thoughts have run much upon Mr. Young. If the election be left to the University, I presume, he might with ease (if he would be willing to accept of it) obtain the place. But I find him not inclinable. . . . Your most humble servant

¹ It must be remembered that the Ecloga of Thomas James (1600) provided a basis for most college libraries. Langbaine only had copies made of the more recent catalogues. Whether his copy of the Ecloga survives I have not been able to discover.

² Coxe made much use of them in his catalogue, but owing to the absence of any preface to that volume does not indicate the fact. In his description of the Balliol Catalogue (Quarto Cat. I, col. 887, No. 25) he called it 'Index codicum MStorum accuratissimus'.

Ger: Langbaine

Queen's Coll. Oxon

16. March 1651

This scheme only mentions a catalogue of printed books, but it undoubtedly gave an impetus to his work on manuscripts. In this field he does not appear to have found any collaborators. For though the names of the 'score of our ablest men in that kind' are known and the sections of the printed books of the Bodleian which were assigned to them,¹ in the corresponding division of the manuscripts² no names are entered. The only date of cataloguing in Langbaine's notebooks is on the revision of his description of MS. Th., which are dated 1654.³ But it is clear that Langbaine had already been long at work. He could not in three or four years have achieved the detailed knowledge of the Bodleian collections which is displayed in his notebooks. Fortunately we have the evidence of the Library accounts that he was helping with Greek manuscripts in 1643,⁴ and it is probable that Greek manuscripts were his first concern. There is a further source of evidence in the format of his notebooks which are quartos and octavos. He used the quartos for all his work of known later date: it appears that the octavos are earlier.⁵

⁵ The most important of these are MSS. Langbaine 18, 19, Wood donat. 7.

Leaving aside the copies of Library lists, the catalogues of Langbaine are of two different kinds, alphabetical catalogues of authors and treatises in collections, and descriptions of all the contents of manuscripts, the volumes being taken in the order in which they stood on the shelves. The Digby and Laud catalogues belong to the first class and the descriptions of the miscellaneous acquisitions to the second.

Both the Digby and Laud catalogues were revisions of earlier catalogues and the choice of alphabetical arrangement, which has the great disadvantage that the parts of a manuscript may be widely separated in the catalogue, cannot be ascribed to Langbaine. It was the Library practice for which the precedent was set by the inclusion of manuscripts in the alphabetical catalogue of printed books (1620). Peter Turner had listed the contents of the Barocci and Roe manuscripts with the volumes taken in the order in which they stood on the shelves, and the Library had had an alphabetical catalogue made.¹ In his early work on manuscripts Langbaine may have regarded this as a normal procedure. In his copy of Turner's catalogue of the Roe collection he added letter symbols against the items, which presumably were intended for an index.² But when he came to deal with a long series of miscellaneous medieval Latin manuscripts there is no trace of any attempt at reducing the descriptions to alphabetical form. He came to recognize more clearly the importance of the manuscript itself. This development is seen in his descriptions of the early numbers of MS. Med. which is an expanded shelf-list giving folio references and incipits.³ Rather later he went over the series again, and made another list containing details of material, size, old shelf-mark, and script.⁴ To take an example:⁵

4 Sermones dominicales Parisiensis in omnes dominicas totius anni; primus est in primam dominicam adventus et incipit Dicite filiae Syon ecce rex etc. In verbis istis habent predicatorum mandatum a spiritu sancto ut loquantur et cui loquantur et quid loquantur—[Index ad finem].

His fully developed descriptions are on the following pattern: at the top, shelf-mark (including obsolete ones), material, and format, then descriptions of contents with full incipits and (sometimes) indications of the folio at which a piece begins; finally at the bottom, a note of earlier owners and usually some indication of the date and script. In order to be able to give the folio references Langbaine foliated all these manuscripts throughout himself, the only foliating of manuscripts undertaken in the Library before the nineteenth century. I give part of one of his descriptions as a specimen:¹

Langbaine was far ahead of his contemporaries in England as a cataloguer of manuscripts.¹ We have only to compare his work with that of Thomas Barlow (no mean scholar), who made a catalogue of MSS. Super D 1 Art (= Med), Super A, B, &c. Art. [= Art.], and Super N 2 (olim M 4) Art. [= Th.].² Here is his description of MS. Art. 72, of which we have already quoted Langbaine's description:

(iv) The Catalogue of 1697

To pass straight from the work of Langbaine to the Catalogue of 1697 may seem a long step, but for twenty years after his death no serious work was done on a general catalogue of manuscripts. The work of the next twenty years finally resulted in the Catalogue of 1697. At first the main causes of delay were the paramount need of producing a new catalogue of printed books, and, when that had appeared in 1674, the personality and interests of Thomas Hyde (Librarian, 1665–1701). The fragments of a catalogue of NE (i.e. manuscripts kept in the New End)³ made by Hyde's predecessor, Thomas Lockey (Librarian, 1660–5), which is bound up with the specimen of a catalogue of printed books he was not allowed to print,⁴ is not impressive. It is a mere hand-list, in which no use appears to have been made of Langbaine's detailed descriptions. It should, however, be set down to the credit of Lockey that he arranged the Selden collection and listed the manuscripts.

Soon after the appearance of the catalogue of printed books, Sir Joseph Williamson, then Secretary of State, wrote to Hyde inquiring about a catalogue of manuscripts. Hyde's reply, dated 14 September 1675, was not encouraging:¹

Sir, as for making ye Catalogue of our Manuscripts, (w^{ch} you were once pleased to mention to me,) it would be a work of some years if I should attempt to do ye whole thing myself; & also an hard task for me who have been so lately tired wth nine years hard labour in making & publishing ye Catalogue of Printed Bookes, whereby my health is impaired.

But however, if it is a thing desirable, I can set it on work by other mens handes, if ye University will allow me some Assistants: & I will oversee & manage ye whole work, & also do my part, especially in ye Eastern Bookes: & by this meanes it may be despatched in some reasonable time. But I confess I have no reason to be very forward in pulling business upon myself, (except it is your desire,) having been so slenderly rewarded for nine years labour already, & I am only fed here wth empty & fruitless promises of making my small place better.

As we shall see shortly, Hyde cannot be shown to have played much part in the production of the 1697 Catalogue; but Sir Joseph Williamson's inquiry reflects an interest which could probably be paralleled from other sources. Several volumes have survived containing catalogues of institutional and private libraries, which seem to have been made in the 1670's.² Archbishop Sancroft had a collection of catalogues of manuscripts 'in all y^e most eminent libraries',³ part of which survives in the Tanner collection.⁴ The same interest is reflected in the opening paragraphs of Edmund Gibson's prefatory epistle to the 1697 catalogue:⁵

³ Letter of C. Hatton to Sancroft, 2 June 1690, in MS. Tanner 27, fol. 144: May it please y^r Grace

The care you have taken, to make Collections of Catalogues of Manuscripts, in all y^e most eminent Libraries, encourages me, to hope, you will pardon this my presumption, in acquainting you, y^t at last Sir John Cotton by great importunity is prevayled upon, to consent to y^e Publication of a Catalogue of y^e MSS. in his Librarye'. ⁴ MSS. Tanner 270-5*.

⁵ The preface was originally cast in the form of a letter to A. Charlett, and it is

I remember how often about five years ago [i.e. 1691-2] you would fall to talking in some such words as these: 'Nothing would be more glorious to the University, nor more thankfully received by scholars than that the manuscripts in Oxford should be exposed to the view of all by the issuing of a catalogue. . . . One has only to look at the great value set upon the Catalogues of manuscripts which John Mill, Henry Maurice, and others collected for their own use.

John Mill is no doubt the Principal of St. Edmund Hall (1685-1707), and Henry Maurice the Fellow of Jesus, who was Archbishop Sancroft's chaplain (1681-5), a friend of Henry Wharton, and for a short time Lady Margaret Professor of Divinity. None of their collections has been identified.

The realization of the need for a catalogue of manuscripts is clear enough, but the means by which it was started in Oxford are not well documented. It will be best to begin with an examination of the contents of the first volume of the 1697 Catalogue, which covers the Bodleian collections. They are as follows:¹

Classis	Author of catalogue as given at the beginning of each classis

An examination of this list shows that the catalogue grew piecemeal. First of all there is a division after classis VIII.¹ The names of the cataloguers of classes I–VIII are those of pre-Restoration scholars (with the exception of Hyde), the succeeding part was mainly the work of members of the group of men, brought together by Arthur Charlett, who were the driving force in producing the work as we now have it, Edmund Gibson (later bishop of London), Thomas Tanner (later bishop of St. Asaph), and White Kennett (later bishop of Peterborough). The original manuscript of the first part (i.e. that which comprises classes I–VIII) is in Library Records. Its title-page reads: ‘CATALOGUS Codicum Manuscriptorum Bibliothecae Bodleianae in Academia Oxoniensi A^o Dⁿⁱ 1686’. At the foot of the page is ‘E.P. B.B.I.’, i.e. Emmanuel Pritchard, Bibliothecae Bodleianae Janitor. It is no doubt the volume which is referred to in the Curator’s Order Book under 8 November 1686:

That Mr. Vice-Chancellor being first satisfied y^t y^e Catalogue of MSS. was made by order of y^e curators it be left to Mr. Vice Ch. to pay Mr. Prichard for his paynes therein not exceeding twentie pounds.

From the same source we learn that in 1689 Pritchard was paid £10 ‘for y^e catalogue’. What were the sources of this catalogue and how far was Pritchard more than a mere copyist? At first sight the answer would seem to be supplied by the 1697 Catalogue itself, where the names of the authors are given at the head of the classis. Pritchard's name nowhere occurs. But this explanation cannot be true, for the first two ascriptions in it to Edmund Chilmead are grossly inaccurate. As we have already seen,¹ he only made an alphabetical index. The catalogue here used is Peter Turner's, supplemented from the notes and descriptions of Gerard Langbaine. Again, while it is true that Langbaine catalogued the Cromwell manuscripts, the descriptions printed give only a much abbreviated version. The same holds true of the descriptions of NE and Super Art. In the 1697 Catalogue the authorship is ascribed to T. Barlow, G. Langbaine, T. Hyde. As we have seen, Barlow's catalogue only covered Super Art. The work is Langbaine's—much abbreviated. The only possible place for Hyde here is as the editor of Langbaine's material, but one would rather not attribute the work to a scholar of the calibre of Hyde. It was done mechanically and without much intelligence. The dates of the manuscripts and the notes on the script are almost all cut out, the initia of the treatises are also omitted, with few exceptions. In short, two of the features which distinguished Langbaine's work were removed. It is much more the kind of work one would expect from a conscientious clerk like Emmanuel Pritchard 'a very industrious useful man', as Hearne called him.²

There is, further, another set of Bodleian catalogues, very similar in content, which can be dated a few years earlier (1680-3). They are part, apparently, of a collection of catalogues of manuscripts in English Libraries, but unfortunately the person for whom they were made is not known. A system of numbering the volumes by letters allows us to reconstruct the greater part of the series, which is as follows:

A. MS. Ch. Ch. 455*	Barocci	[= 1-246]
	Roe	[= 247-75]
	Digby	[= 1602-1839]
	NE	[= 1840-2494]
	Fairfax (1673)	[= 3881-3909]

* My attention was drawn to these three volumes from Christ Church by Mr. N. R. Ker. It is not known how they came into the possession of the College. MSS. 455 and 467 were apparently received between 1717 and c. 1770.

† A note by Humphrey Owen in front of the volume shows that it came into the Library with the Tanner collection.

‡ This section can be dated c. 1680 from internal evidence.

The relationship of volumes A and C¹ to the 1686 Catalogue is close. Both omit the Junius collection, which was bequeathed in 1678. In the section NE, where the source of both is the descriptions of Langbaine in MSS. Langbaine 5 and 6, A is very close indeed to the 1686 Catalogue. The differences are only in slight details, but they are enough to show that the 1686 Catalogue is not a copy of A. There are a number of instances where A retains matter from Langbaine which is not found in the 1686 Catalogue,² and in one instance at least a note on the script appears in the 1686 Catalogue but not in A.³ In the 1686 Catalogue the items are numbered within each manuscript, whereas in A this is not consistently done. The most probable explanation of these facts seems to be that A (and C) are abbreviations of Langbaine's descriptions made on the same principles as the 1686 Catalogue, and that the work was done by Emmanuel Pritchard. Pritchard wrote a clerk's hand which is clear but variable, and therefore difficult to identify with certainty, but I am inclined to think that he wrote A and C as well as the 1686 Catalogue.¹

¹ Perhaps the missing vol. B contained a catalogue of the Laudian collection in order of the shelf-mark. Those in D and E are alphabetical. The division of collections between A and C is between those kept in the Selden End and elsewhere.

If this conclusion is accepted, it is necessary to try to define more closely the part played by Edward Bernard in the editing of the 1697 Catalogue, which commonly goes under his name. The account given by Edmund Gibson in the prefatory epistle is that in 1691–2 discussions were going on in Oxford about the desirability of a catalogue of Bodleian manuscripts, and that Dr. Jonathan Edwards, principal of Jesus College, then Vice-Chancellor [1689–92], approached the Delegates of the University Press, who accepted the scheme. The name of Bernard immediately occurred to them as a suitable editor ‘propter infinitam Librorum notitiam et magnam domi forisque auctoritatem’, and Bernard accepted. This account of the launching of a large and difficult academic enterprise is too simple and straightforward to express the whole truth. In two letters of Bernard addressed to Thomas Smith there are tantalizing glimpses of preliminary negotiations. The first reference occurs in a letter dated Oxford, 24 April 1692:²

How well the Bodleian Catalogue will be published I cannot yet write, having not seen the specimen. As soon as it is wrought off, it shall accompany Ludolphus his letters into your hands.

The second is dated Oxford, 18 June 1692:³

The Catalogus MSS Bodleianorum stops because they would be more curious and research the books again: so that I fear our pittance of life will not obtain that sight.

Further, among Bernard's papers is a sheet in his own handwriting, dated 8 October 1692, and headed ‘Proposals to the Curators of the Bodleian Library’. The third proposal is the only one that concerns the catalogue. It runs as follows:⁴

That the Catalogue of the manuscripts belonging to the Publique Library be printed, beginning with y^e old Bodleian manuscripts, by the care of the Librarians; and the impression commence before Christmas next; the publishers being allow'd competently per sheet; as the Delegates for printing shall think fit.

¹ D and E were also copied by him. G and H are earlier.

² MS. Smith 47 (S.C. 15654), fol. 109. Ludolfus is H. W. Ludolf, for whom see J. S. G. Simmons, Oxford Slavonic Papers, i, 1950, pp. 104–29.

³ Ibid., fol. 111.

⁴ MS. Smith 11 (S.C. 15618), p. 35. Macray, Annals, p. 161 gives, without warning, an abbreviated text, which is seriously misleading.

The two letters and the proposal imply, first, that there was an existing catalogue which Bernard, at any rate, thought was virtually ready for the press, and, secondly, that negotiations about printing it had taken place. The existing catalogue can be no other than the 1686 Catalogue of Pritchard. So far there is no difficulty in dovetailing Gibson's account and the evidence of Bernard.

The question of Bernard's editorship is more difficult. From the letters and the proposal it is clear that Bernard had not been invited to act as editor by 8 October 1692. Yet there is no doubt that he did become editor. No evidence has been discovered to show why his proposal was amended nor when the invitation was made to him, but it may be permissible to offer a conjecture. The terms of Bernard's proposal are slightly odd. The catalogue was to be printed 'by the care of the Librarians'. The Librarian was Hyde, whose reluctance to proceed with a catalogue of manuscripts we have already seen, and whose hostility to the final scheme is attested by Bernard himself.¹ The Under-Librarian or Janitor was Pritchard, who had done the work, and the plural 'Librarians' was perhaps chosen deliberately to avoid casting a slur on Hyde.² But Pritchard was not a scholar, and the Curators would naturally hesitate to entrust him with the sole charge of so difficult a task. Perhaps it was at this stage that Bernard was invited to act as editor. He was one of the outstanding scholars of his generation in Oxford, and an obvious candidate. 'His temper being as obliging as his erudition was extensive, his aid was on all sides asked and obtained by those engaged in bringing to light the literary relics of antiquity.'³

This interpretation fits in with Bernard's treatment of Pritchard's text. Despite the doubts of some who knew its defects, compared with the full descriptions of Langbaine, and who wished 'to research the books again', he was above all anxious to see a catalogue in print, and was convinced that Pritchard's catalogue was virtually ready for press. He contented himself with adding a running number to each manuscript, with improving Pritchard's Latinity here and there, and with striking out some details which seemed redundant.¹ He made no attempt to recatalogue a single manuscript.

The copy was probably sent to press early in 1693. On 13 February Bernard wrote to Smith:²

My few hours and little health are expended upon Josephus and upon the Catalogue of Bodleian MSS. which is now in the Presse.

There is evidence from the records of the University Press³ that forty sheets were printed and corrected that year, and on 4 December Bernard wrote to Smith:⁴

The Catalogues of the Collegiate MSS. proceed parallel with those of the Bodleian and will all be ended . . . by Easter.

These are the catalogues of manuscripts in Oxford colleges, and their inclusion marks the first extension of the plan.

The persons responsible for this extension are not named in Bernard's correspondence, but there can be little doubt that the prime mover was Arthur Charlett, helped chiefly by Edmund Gibson, White Kennett, and Thomas Tanner. Bernard was too infirm to undertake the work of editor with sufficient thoroughness. He toiled away, however, on a large-scale index covering the Bodleian section and the Oxford and Cambridge colleges. He also included references to manuscripts in certain foreign libraries. It was an unpractical undertaking and remained unfinished and unprinted. Bound in three large folio volumes it reposes in Library Records.⁵ In a letter to Smith of 2 February 1695/6, there is a note of disappointment, which in a lesser man might have been angry resentment:⁶

The Catalogue work is in a manner ended to which is to be added an index made by Mr. Wanley and only a preface¹ of mine to which I shall scarcely affix my name.

In another letter to Smith, Bernard writes: 'The Catalogue of MSS. proceeds so that the excellent Archbishop's [i.e. Laud's] donation is in the composers hands.' (MS. Smith 47, fol. 108); but the letter has neither date nor postmark.

Even in the later part of the Bodleian sections the intervention of the younger men was necessary. Bernard's editing of Pritchard was tolerable in classes I–VII, but some of the descriptions in classis VIII were totally insufficient. For instance, Bernard had allowed the following description of the 150 volumes of the Dodsworth collection to stand:

3881 DODSWORTHII collectiones antiquitatum 150 voluminibus contentae et insuper 28 varii generis MSS.

White Kennett supplied full descriptions, running to nearly fifty folio pages, but the brief notice, which had evidently been printed off, remained. Similar double treatment was accorded to the collections: Leland, R. James, Isaac Casaubon, Gerard Langbaine.²

The final appearance of the volume was delayed until November 1698, though it is dated 1697 on the title-page, and is therefore commonly referred to as the 1697 Catalogue. The main reason for the delay was the further extension of the plan to include catalogues of libraries of corporate bodies and private individuals outside Oxford. The story of this extension lies outside the scope of this introduction,³ but it may be noted that Hyde was hostile.⁴ We have already seen that Edmund Gibson wrote a prefatory epistle. He also contributed the life of Sir Thomas Bodley. Humphrey Wanley made the index, to which he wrote an introduction.⁵

For all its imperfections the 1697 Catalogue was a great achievement. It stands with the Bibliotheca Belgica of Antonius

¹ This preface has not survived, but is perhaps referred to in a letter of E. Thwaites to H. Wanley, 24 Mar. 1698/9: 'I was latly at the Library to consult a Paper which I could not finde in its proper place. Twas Dr Bernard's preface to his Alph.¹¹ Index of MSS. Sanderus (1640) and the Bibliotheca bibliothecarum of Bernard de Montfaucon (1735) as one of the main attempts to make known to scholars the treasures of European libraries. Its merits were at once recognized by contemporaries. Thus the reviewer in the Bibliotheca librorum novorum for 1698 writes:¹

Opus sane Cl. Oxonienses & nationis suae gloriae et exterorum utilitati consuluerunt, catalogis his librorum manuscriptorum Angliae et Hiberniae in lucem editis.

In England it made possible the Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica of Thomas Tanner (edited by David Wilkins and published in 1745), which still remains the most complete repertory of English medieval writers.²

THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY

I. CLASSIFICATION

AT the beginning of the eighteenth century the problem of finding space to house printed books was beginning to make itself felt. Joseph Bowles (Librarian, 1719–29) undertook a large scale rearrangement, which affected the manuscripts kept at the east end of the Library. In 1726 those which were kept in cupboards running under the gallery in Arts End¹ were moved out into new cupboards at the south-west and north-west corners of Arts End then called Arch E, F (now B, D). They were moved en bloc and not given fresh shelf-marks.² When the manuscripts in the Librarian's study (in Musaeo)³ were moved in 1728, they were unfortunately renumbered, thus throwing out the correspondence with the numbers in the 1697 Catalogue. The name of the collection was changed to e Musaeo. The numbers then assigned to MSS. e Mus. are those which are still current.

The policy of keeping collections of small and medium size intact and naming them after their donors or owners was maintained. Thus we have MSS. Bernard (1698), Hody (1707), Jones (1708), Grabe (1720), Perrott (1727), Cherry (1729), Carte (1753), St. Amand (1755), Ballard (1756), John Walker (1756), Clarendon (1759, &c.), Willis (1760), Bradley (1776, &c.). Naturally the same policy was applied to the great collections of Tanner (1736) and Rawlinson (1756).

Of these collections only two presented serious difficulty in classification, Tanner and Rawlinson, but scarcely any attempt was made to deal with the problems so presented. The arrangement of the Tanner collection is the least satisfactory of any in the Library. Not only are medieval and post-medieval manuscripts jumbled together in no ascertainable order, but the surviving part of Tanner's letters⁴ is in two series, both in reversed

² A careful note of the changes was set down by Bowles in front of the hand-list. On Bowles's work see G. M. Briggs, B.L.R. iii. 213–22.

chronological order (Nos. 21–50, 51–80). In the Long Vacation of 1741 Thomas Toynbee, M.A., of Balliol College, was given the task of putting in order and cataloguing the collection.¹ But this was not the first work that had been done on it. Bundles of unbound papers had been sent to Thomas Sedgley, the binder, in 1737 or 1738.²

It appears that Toynbee took the volumes just as they stood on the shelves and described them. There were no numbers in them, and it was probably intended to arrange them later in a more rational order. But in the end Humphrey Owen (Librarian, 1747–68) wrote in numbers that agreed with Toynbee's catalogue.³ These have remained unchanged.

The great mass of the Rawlinson collection, which eventually formed some 5,000 volumes, and its very miscellaneous character, presented far greater problems.⁴ A sheet of paper in the handwriting of Humphrey Owen has survived, on which he wrote a scheme for classifying the manuscripts. It is as follows:

Classes for the Arrangement of Dr. Rawlinson's Books

1. MSS. of the Bible or any Parts of it in any Language. Commentaries and Glosses on the same.
2. MSS. of Gr. or Latin Fathers, and Classical Authors.
3. MSS. of Monkish writers before the Invention of Printing, whether Poets or Historians etc. in any language.
4. Old Printed Books.
Modern printed Books with MSS. Notes.
- 5.⁵ Collections Critical or Philological.
6. MSS. Collections relating to English Antiquities
D^o relating to English History Ecclesiastical or Civil.
7. Collections relating to the Antiquities of the University or City of Oxford.
- 8.⁵ Collections for the Continuation of Wood's Athenæ and Fasti.
9. Charters and Statutes of particular Societies.

¹ Reg. C: 'To Mr. Toynby of Bal. Coll. for putting in order & making a catalogue of Bp Tanner's MSS 12-12-00.' 'Mr. Toynby began Jun. 6, ended Octob. 6.'

² The list of bundles is written on a page at the end of the Entry Book for 1730–41, undated, but assignable to 1737 or 1738. There is a note of fourteen volumes received back from Sedgley in the Day-book, 1724–50, on 11 Nov. 1738.

³ From the Entry Books it appears that the manuscripts were used from 1745 and that they were then known by Toynbee's numbers.

⁵ Originally class 5 was placed after class 6, and class 8 after class 9.

10. Voyages and Travels.
11. Political Tracts.
12. The[ologica]l tracts.

But it was apparently not until the time of Owen's successor, John Price, that listing was begun (c. 1771). This list (known as the 'Old List'), which now survives only in a later copy (c. 1810), runs from 1 to 1156 arranged as follows:

- 1-159 classical
- 160-210, 261-71 medicine and botany
- 211-60, 272-505 law (282-321 Statutes of institutions)
- 506-19 wills and other ecclesiastical instruments
- 520-1156 theology (755-834 liturgies).

The series must have extended further at one time, since a few numbers between 1156 and 1386 are known, but presumably these numbers had been rearranged by the time the extant copy of the Old List was made. The numbers of this series were written by hand on labels pasted at the foot of the spine: many have been lost or destroyed in rebinding.

It will be convenient to explain here, out of chronological sequence, the dispersion of this early series. In 1789 the classical and biblical manuscripts were taken out with select manuscripts from other collections and put in the room later known as the Auctarium (B.N. Rawl., Auct. Rawl., Auct. G., Rawl. G). Four or five were put in Rawl. B. (c. 1810), one in Rawl. poet. (c. 1810), the majority in Rawl. A (1831) and C (c. 1844). Of those left Statutes became a separate class (Rawl. M), the Liturgical manuscripts went into Miscell. liturg. (1860-77)¹ and were later classified as Rawl. liturg., and the oddments were incorporated in Rawl. D.

Acquisitions of single volumes were referenced into NE. This section was becoming full by the middle of the century, and about 1751 many of the manuscripts, including most of the Bernard collection, which had been put into it, were formed into a new series called Extra numerum. This proved only a temporary expedient, and about ten years later the whole section was completely rearranged. It was given a new name 'MSS. Bodley', followed by a running number. The name was no doubt derived from the running title in this section of the 1697 Catalogue: 'Codices MSS. Thomae Bodleii'. The new arrangement was not made for the purpose of putting the manuscripts in a more logical order, but simply to save space by a more minute ranging of the volumes according to size. It is in this order, with some minor changes in the later part of the series, that the manuscripts have been known since. The work was carried out by Owen. He wrote in the volumes not only the new shelf-mark, but also the number assigned to the volume in the 1697 Catalogue.

The Picture Gallery had been intended ultimately to be used for housing books. The Tanner and Rawlinson collections were the first manuscripts to be placed there. These two collections, however, were so large that the resources of the Picture Gallery did not long suffice, and in 1789 the Library took over one of the schools in the quadrangle, the Anatomy School on the first floor of the south range. At first the room was referred to as B[iblio]theca] N[ova],¹ but in 1794 it was decided to name it the Auctarium.

The intention was to bring together in a well-furnished room (the elegant bookcases were designed by Wyatt) the books then accounted most precious in the Library, namely the Bibles and the Greek and Latin classics. It was a fine piece of librarianship in the spirit of the eighteenth-century enlightenment. Sentiment was put aside. Collections that had been kept together for a century and a half were separated, though it is true that most of them were still known by the name of their donor. Nineteen volumes were selected from the Digby, all the Greek and 106 Latin from Laudian collections. These were then called Digby B.N., Laud Gr. and Laud Lat. Similarly, the manuscripts taken from the Rawlinson collection were called Rawl. B.N. The other manuscripts, however, including volumes from the Fairfax, Hatton, and Tanner collections, lost their identity in the general designation Auct.² These manuscripts were restored to their original collections, mainly by E. W. B. Nicholson, in the late nineteenth century. The manuscripts taken out of the miscellaneous series (MSS. Bodley) are still kept together as a collection, known as MSS. Auct.

² It was in this way that MS. Tanner 169* (S.C. 9995) escaped Hackman's catalogue.

The scheme of the Auctarium A–G, as it was established in 1789 was as follows:¹

- Auct. A. MSS. Barocchi.
- Auct. B. Large folios (chiefly Bibles) printed and MSS.
- Auct. C. MSS. Laud Gr., Laud Lat., Cromwell, Roe, Digby B.N.
- Auct. D. Biblical and patristic MSS. mainly Latin, taken out of the Bodley, e. Mus., Hatton, Marshall, and Tanner collections.
- Auct. E. Greek patristic and ecclesiastical MSS. taken out of various collections.
- Auct. F. Classical manuscripts, taken out of various collections.
- Auct. G. Classical and biblical manuscripts taken out of the Rawlinson collection.

The full rigour of this arrangement of a select collection hardly made itself felt as far as users of the manuscripts were concerned, because in the course of the next generation all the collections of manuscripts were concentrated in the adjoining rooms on the first floor of the quadrangle. One very unfortunate result was that all the shelf-marks of the Laudian manuscripts, which they had borne since c. 1640, were changed, and the non-Oriental manuscripts broken up into three series, Greek, Latin, and Miscellaneous.² It is in this order that they have been kept since. The Greek and Latin series were, as we have seen, the manuscripts kept in the Auctarium. The miscellaneous series, which consists chiefly of Latin manuscripts, represents the remainder of the non-Oriental part of the collection. The numbers of the Hatton manuscripts were also changed, but happily the numbers of the Digby collection were not disturbed.

II. CATALOGUES

No official printed catalogue of any Bodleian collection of manuscripts was issued between 1697 and 1806. Humphrey Wanley started a manuscript continuation of the 1697 Catalogue for collections kept together, and it was continued by Thomas Hearne (Sub-Librarian, 1712–16). Joseph Bowles (Librarian, 1719–29) added one collection (No. 9). Its contents are as follows:

and in 1747 Mr. Winbolt was paid three guineas for transcribing the additions to the Catalogue of Manuscripts,¹ i.e. for transcribing them in a clean interleaved copy.

The Catalogue by T. Toynbee of the Tanner collection has already been referred to. Whatever its defects, it served to make the contents of the collection accessible to those who came to the Library, and manuscript copies of it were made, which circulated outside the Library.² It may serve as an instance of the rule that it is better to have almost any catalogue than to wait for a perfect one.

III

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

I. CLASSIFICATION

THE same principles of classification continued to be used for manuscripts until the 1880's. The main collections acquired were referenced by the names of their donors or owners, D'Orville (1804), Gough (1809), E. D. Clarke (1809), Canonici (1817), Malone (1821), Douce (1834), Hamilton (1857), Montagu (1864); but less important collections were also similarly referenced, Boreales (1828), Bowyer (1838), Blakeway (1840), Milles (1843), Pigott (1847), Mendham (1856). In all these collections, except Gough and Canonici, a single running number was assigned to each manuscript. In the Gough collection the following subdivisions were made:¹ maps, general topography, ecclesiastical topography, natural history, English counties in alphabetical order, Wales, Islands, Scotland, Ireland, Saxon, and Northern Literature, missals, drawings, Gaignières drawings, miscellaneous antiquities. This division of the Gough collection was the model for Nicholson's reclassification of other topographical collections in 1884. The Canonici collection, which contained over 2,000 volumes, was subdivided on the model of the division adopted for the Laudian collection when it was moved to the Auctarium and neighbouring rooms, into Greek, Latin classical, Latin biblical, Latin patristic, Miscellaneous, Italian. The first four series were arranged in final order soon after the arrival of the collection. The miscellaneous series underwent a rearrangement at an early stage to eliminate all manuscripts written in Italian.² The section of 262 liturgical manuscripts remained unlisted until c. 1877, when Coxe created the series 'Miscell. liturg.', the numbers of which have remained unchanged, as far as the Canonici collection is concerned, but a prefix (Canonici) has been added to mark their provenance.³

The miscellaneous acquisitions continued to be placed in the series of MSS. Bodley, or in MSS. Auct., if they were Greek or Latin classical or biblical manuscripts. A special section, Auct. T., was created for the manuscripts purchased from the Saibante (1820) and Meermann (1824) collections. This section was added to occasionally until 1885. The arrangement of manuscripts in the Auctarium c. 1820 was as follows:¹

This arrangement was kept, in general, until the manuscripts were moved to the New Library in 1940.

The series of MSS. Bodley was continued until c. 1860,⁴ when H. O. Coxe started a new series called Addit. Bodl. About 1877 it was rearranged according to the sizes of the volumes into MSS. Add. A, B, C, D (E was added in 1883). This series was closed in 1887. Thus MSS. Add. A–E contained the miscellaneous accessions of c. 1860–86, but ‘many older MSS. were put into it during that period, and some have been taken out’.⁵ As we have seen, Coxe⁶ also formed a series Miscell. liturg., which included liturgical manuscripts from the Rawlinson as well as from the Canonici collections.

When E. W. B. Nicholson became Librarian in 1882, he planned a new subject classification for the whole Library, manuscripts as well as printed books. This was a scheme which had been cherished during Coxe's régime by some leading Curators, notably Benjamin Jowett. F. Madan wrote a long memorandum for the Librarian in September 1882, pointing out the disadvantages of breaking up collections long kept together, and the scheme was never carried out,¹ except in one small field where it has proved useful. Since the end of the eighteenth century a number of small collections on county history had been received by gift or by purchase: Bridges (1795-6), Blakeway (1840), Milles (1843), W. N. Clarke (1868), Gough Nichols (1874), Watson (1875). In 1884 all these collections except Blake-way were formed into a series called MSS. Top(ography), subdivided into gen(eral) and eccles(iastical), and into England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland with divisions for England, Scotland, and Wales by counties. The volumes were also arranged by size, which is denoted by a small letter preceding the running number, e.g. MS. Top. gen. a. 1. The size divisions a-g were the same as those used for printed books.² The collections of manuscript music were arranged c. 1885-7.³

In July 1887 Nicholson introduced a new classification for other miscellaneous accessions, which is chiefly by language. The original heads were:

English	bib(les), liturg(ies), th(eology), hist(ory), poet(ry), misc(ellane-ous).
Greek	Bib(les), liturg(ies), th(eology), class(ics), misc(ellane-ous).
Latin	Bib(les), liturg(ies), th(eology), class(ics), misc(ellane-ous).

followed by Basque, Cornish, Dutch, French, German, Icelandic, Irish, Italian, Manx, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, Swedish, Welsh. In each section there are the size divisions a-g. The complete shelf-mark consists of the heading followed by the size notation and running number, e.g. MS. Lat. bib. f. 1. For rolls and papyri the symbols R and P are added in brackets. A few additions have been made subsequently: Autogr(aphs) (1889), Breton (1902), Latin hist(ory) (1923), Scandinavian (1924), and English lett(ers) (1928). A few older manuscripts, mainly those 'found in the Library' were referenced into the new classification.

¹ The memorandum was later endorsed by Nicholson with the following note: 'In my earliest days at the Bodleian I entertained the idea of rearranging the entire library according to subjects . . . and it was simply as the result of longer experience and more careful consideration that I abandoned the idea, which I afterwards saw to be (1) thoroughly bad, and (2) if it had been good, thoroughly impracticable.'

The accessions of western manuscripts in the second half of the nineteenth century were relatively small and were dealt with soon after their arrival. The largest collection was the older papers of the Archdeacons of Oxford and Berkshire, which the registrar, Gordon Dayman, 'placed at the disposal of the Curators' in 1878. They were chiefly arranged by W. F. Thurland. The collections of certain Oxford colleges were deposited from 1882,¹ but, apart from a small number of items, were already arranged and catalogued. The Music School Library was transferred in 1885, and the more important part already had a full catalogue.

Throughout the nineteenth century the task of overtaking arrears of arrangement and classification—no less than of cataloguing—hung heavily over the Library staff. In the early years of the century Bulkeley Bandinel (Librarian 1813–60), and Philip Bliss² had begun what was to be the final arrangement of the Rawlinson collection. In 1809–10 Bliss started three new series, Rawl. letters, miscellaneous (at first called historical), and poetry. They have remained substantially unchanged except for later additions. Misc. was later called Rawl. D. At the same time Bandinel formed a series of historical and topographical manuscripts called Rawl. B of which there is a contemporary list. It has remained unchanged, except for minor modifications in the topographical section, and is arranged as follows:

- 1–145 Genealogy and Heraldry.
- 146–247 History (mainly medieval chronicles).
- 248–57 Topography, general.
- 258–467 Topography, counties of England arranged alphabetically.

516-20 History, miscellaneous.

The creation of a class called Rawl. B led to the manuscripts in the Old List sometimes being called Rawl. (a) or A. At about the same time another new series was arranged, which with very considerable changes became the present Rawl. A. In consequence the designation Rawl. A is ambiguous from the time of creation of Rawl. B (c. 1810) to the time when the majority of the manuscripts in the Old List were drafted into new series (c. 1844).

The present Rawl. A was arranged by Stephen Reay, Sub-Librarian, in 1831, and the early hand-list is written by him. The arrangement of Rawl. C was begun by Reay (Nos. 1-747), c. 1844, and finished by W. D. Macray, c. 1850. The earliest extant hand-list is by Macray and is in effect a draft for his catalogue.

This arrangement of the collection was far from satisfactory and deserved the strictures of Sir Frederick Madden who wished one continuous series to be formed,¹ but it was impracticable at this stage, and would have caused too much dislocation later.

So far the work was done under the leadership of Bandinel. The great accessions, however, of the earlier years of his period of office absorbed the energy of the staff. That they were promptly dealt with is a signal achievement considering how small the staff was.

In Bandinel's later years less was done. On 30 January 1858 there appeared in the *Athenaeum*² an article entitled 'The Rawlinson manuscripts' and signed 'F.S.A.', in which complaint was made that no catalogue of the Rawlinson and Tanner collections had ever been compiled and that 'no one, not even the librarians, know all the resources of the extraordinary assemblage [of manuscripts]'. On the same day the Curators met and:

Resolved that Dr. Bandinel should furnish the Curators with a statement of the portion of the Library of which there is still no printed catalogue, including MSS. Prints. etc.

² pp. 147 f.; see B.L.R. iv. 6 f. Mr. A. W. Ashby informs me that it was written by the editor, William Hepworth Dixon.

This report has not survived, but no doubt the work of drawing it up devolved chiefly on H. O. Coxe, and when he succeeded as Librarian (1860) a fresh start was made.

From April to August 1861 Macray was engaged 'in clearing out several cupboards of Rawlinson MSS., arranging them and superintending binding; about 900 MSS.' In the main they were probably added to Rawl. D, which he finally arranged in 1875. In 1865 he began the arrangement and the listing of Rawl. E, (Sermons), which were completed in 1875. Rawl. P., Holman and other Essex manuscripts, were arranged by him for the binder in March 1861.¹

The Library possessed two very important collections of seventeenth-century state papers, the Carte papers given 1753-78, and the Clarendon papers given 1759-85. The Carte papers were arranged by Macray for binding in 276 volumes, 1862.² When the Clarendon papers were arranged and bound is not exactly recorded, but a considerable part of the series was bound c. 1840.³ A supplementary series was received from the Clarendon trustees in 1859, and was dealt with by Coxe, who also did other work on the papers, between 1858 and 1863. A smaller collection of papers relating to the English Church in the seventeenth century, the John Walker manuscripts, given in 1756, were arranged for binding by Macray in 1862.

In 1875 the Curators called for another special report. On 27 November Benjamin Jowett moved that a committee be appointed for the purpose 'of conferring with the Librarian on the expenses and management of the Library'. On 1 January 1876 Jowett wrote to the Librarian asking to have some returns prepared, together with a request for 'an estimate of the number of manuscripts remaining to be catalogued'. The detailed return is not preserved, but in the report of the Committee (March 1876) it is stated that

Of other [than Oriental] Manuscripts there are about 9000⁴ in the

² It was in part a rebinding.

³ Diary of Sir F. Madden, 27 June 1842: 'On the table in this (i.e. the Curators') room I noticed also above 50 vols. folio of the Clarendon Papers, which have been recently bound in half-russia, but not very well done.' MS. Eng. hist. c. 155, p. 168.

⁴ This figure was corrected by Coxe later (letter to the Vice-Chancellor, 9 June 1877): 'For 9000 we are to read 5000. The error arose from adding 3339 MSS. which Bodleian which are not entered in any Alphabetical Catalogue of the Library. The greater part of them are unpagged. Of the Sancroft MSS. there is no account at all.

The Carte MSS. have no Catalogue.

The Dodsworth MSS. are indexed by Dodsworth himself at the beginning of each volume of 186 volumes, but there is no Alphabetical Catalogue of them.

Most of the MSS. relating to County History have no Catalogue. If any of these uncatalogued MSS. were stolen, they would scarcely be missed, and there would be no possibility of identifying them.

We are informed that about a year and a half would be required to make a general descriptive Catalogue of them, and we strongly recommend that the work be begun without delay.

The main benefit of this report was that attention was called to the need for foliation. This was a matter which could be and was remedied. Why the Committee picked out these few classes of manuscripts for particular mention is not clear. There were others equally needing treatment, but renewed efforts were made. Macray listed the Sancroft Adversaria in 1876-7.¹ He also dealt with certain sections of the collections transferred from the Ashmolean Museum in 1860. In 1878 he listed the Lister and Aubrey manuscripts and arranged for binding the correspondence of John Aubrey, Edward Lhuyd, W. Huddesford, and R. Plot. He also arranged for binding the papers of David Wilkins, which were purchased in 1836, and 'the large mass of papers of M. Zamboni (agent in England for Saxony, Hesse, and Modena) which had remained unopened in the very bundles in which Dr. Rawlinson originally bought them . . . 21 vols. folio about 3600 papers'.² As we have already seen, he arranged Rawl. D in final order in 1875, and a hand-list was made by W. H. Timberlake, 1877-(?) 80. Coxe himself in his return for the Visitation of 1877 reported that he had briefly catalogued 100 Miscellaneous liturgical manuscripts and 50 Additional Bodley.

By the time of Coxe's death the arrears were substantially were specially mentioned as needing a more specific catalogue, which had been already included in the 5000.'

¹ It remains uncertain whether they reached the Library with the Tanner (1736) or the Rawlinson (1756) collection, probably the latter, since there is no trace of them in Toynbee's catalogue of the Tanner MSS.

² Now Rawl. letters 116-38 (S.C. 15004-26). Macray later drew the attention of A. C. Clark to them. Clark wrote an article on the new light they throw on the history of the classical manuscripts of Graevius in Neue Heidelberger Jahrbücher, 1891, p. 238.

overtaken, and when Madan began the Summary Catalogue a decade later his progress was not seriously impeded by having to wait while masses of unsorted papers were arranged and bound. Only two series of relatively slight importance remained, the papers of the astronomer James Bradley (given 1776–1829), and the collations made for Robert Holmes's edition of the Septuagint (deposited 1789–1805). They were listed in 1890 and bound soon after.

II. CATALOGUING

(i) Bulkeley Bandinel, Philip Bliss, Thomas Gaisford

The accession of Bulkeley Bandinel to the librarianship (1813) marks the beginning of a determined attempt to deal with the arrears of cataloguing. When the plan was drawn up for a new catalogue of the Library in 1814, it was proposed 'to form a compleat catalogue both of the MSS. and of the printed books',¹ but, as had happened in the seventeenth century, the prior need for a new catalogue of printed books and the great acquisitions made at that time by gift (Gough, 1809; Malone, 1821), and by purchase (D'Orville, 1804; E. D. Clarke, 1809; Canonici, 1817) made progress slow. Catalogues of the D'Orville and Clarke collections were made by Thomas Gaisford, Regius Professor of Greek, and later Dean of Christ Church, and published in 1806 and 1812. A catalogue of the Gough collection by Bandinel and Bliss was published in 1814, and of the Malone collection in 1836. The Catalogue of the Boreal MSS. by Finn Magnussen, from whom they were purchased, was published in 1832. As we shall see later, catalogues of the Douce and Canonici manuscripts were published in 1839 and 1854. The catalogues which were made during this period of the Rawlinson manuscripts² were little more than lists, and remained in manuscript.

(ii) William Henry Black

The most important catalogue made in Oxford at this time was that of the Ashmole manuscripts, which were then still in the Ashmolean Museum; but since the manuscripts were transferred to the Bodleian in 1860, and since Black's catalogue is now reckoned as vol. x of the Library's Quarto series, it will be convenient to treat of it briefly here.¹

W. H. Black was invited to come to Oxford in October 1830 to examine the manuscripts and to prepare a specimen of a new catalogue. His specimen was approved, and he settled in Oxford and began work in March 1831. It was stipulated that the work should be completed in fifteen months, but at the end of this period Black had finished little more than half. Many of the manuscripts were far more voluminous than he expected, and the number of them had been underestimated.² It was not until May 1833 that he finished a draft of the catalogue. At this point a series of delays began. Black entered the services of H.M. Commissioners of Public Records in 1834, and was not able to devote much time to the completion of the work. Printing was begun in May 1835 and continued with minor breaks until 1839, by which time cols. 1-1200 were printed off. There followed a long pause until 1844, during which time Black was otherwise occupied. In April 1844 he resumed work and the catalogue was published in the summer of 1845, without preface or index. He had collected some materials for a preface,³ from which it is worth while to give two extracts. The first is an explanation of a feature which must have puzzled many users of the catalogue, namely the placing of an asterisk before certain items. Black notes⁴ '* means deserving to be printed'. The other is a general observation:⁵

It ought to be a rule in the republic of Literature, that every thing published from a MS. shall be given to the Library where the MS. is kept, if it be but a single sheet of a great work.

Black's catalogue is justly esteemed. The reason for its excellence can be best illustrated from some words of his in a letter to Sir Frederick Madden:⁶ 'I have never skipped over anything difficult, nor suppressed anything important nor loaded my pages with superfluities.' Black had a considerable range of curious and exact learning, which enabled him to deal with the varied contents of Ashmole's collection.

(iii) Henry Octavius Coxe

The first member of the Library staff to devote himself to a full-scale catalogue of any of the collections of manuscripts was H. O. Coxe, who entered the Library as Sub-Librarian in 1838. He 'came to the Bodleian from the manuscript department of the British Museum, where, in work chiefly concerning the Arundel MSS. for some five years, he had been laying the foundation of his knowledge of palaeography'.¹ In April 1839 he was employed in cataloguing the Douce manuscripts, which had arrived five years earlier, and by 13 August he had finished the rough draft.² Printing began in early November, and the catalogue, furnished with some lithographic facsimiles, appeared the following year.

In the spring of 1840, with Gaisford's encouragement, he began work on the cataloguing of Greek manuscripts received since 1697, which included the Canonici Greek manuscripts. By October he thought he had described all of them; but printing could not start until the Curators' authorization had been obtained at the Visitation (8 November). This led to a change of plan. Coxe set to work, meanwhile, on the Latin manuscripts in the Canonici collection. In the course of 1841 Canonici Lat. class., bibl. and patr. were finished, and on Gaisford's advice he decided to continue with the rest of the Canonici latini³—the miscellaneous series. This was finished by October 1843. What was started as a catalogue of Greek manuscript accessions resolved itself into a catalogue of the Canonici collection. The earlier part had been sent to press in 1842, and proofs of Canon. misc. were received in December 1843. The volume still lacked an index which Coxe did not make till 1851. It was finally published in 1854 (Quarto series, vol. ii).

The reason for this change in plan was the decision to recata-logue all the Greek manuscripts in the Library, despite the mass of Rawlinson manuscripts still uncatalogued. In his diary for 10 November 1843 (i.e. just after the annual visitation of the Library) is the entry:

Dean [i.e. Gaisford] decided that I should now commence the Barocci. Hackman¹ to stay for the Rawlinson.

But progress was slow, perhaps because the catalogue of college manuscripts was gathering momentum. In July 1847 he was still working on the Barocci collection, which was finished in January 1848. The remaining collections were done in 1848–9, and Casaubon was reached in July 1850. In October he began the index. In November 1851 he wrote: 'Found 140 Greek MSS not catalogued. Gaisford facetious thereon.' On 30 January 1852 the Delegates of the Press voted him £200 for the work, on which his comment is 'Very liberal'. Finally, in March 1852 the Dean decided that the adversaria of G. Langbaine² and J. St. Amand should be included. The volume appeared in 1853 (Quarto series, vol. i), a year after the two volumes containing the description of the manuscripts in Oxford college collections.

The scheme for cataloguing the collections of manuscripts in college libraries was inaugurated by All Souls. In Coxe's diary under 2 June 1841, there is the entry:

B[ulkeley] B[andinell] gave me a letter from All Souls employing me to catalogue the MSS.

Work began on 17 June and by 25 October a draft of the catalogue had been completed. It was published in 1842 as a separate volume with a preface and an index. An extract from the preface is worth quoting, as it is Coxe's only statement about his aim as a cataloguer:³

It remains but to say a few words on the present Catalogue. In its compilation care has been taken to give, as nearly as may be, the date of the MS., to preserve the names of former possessors of particular volumes, and to supply to anonymous or pseudonymous treatises the names of the original writer. If the Editor has not always been successful in this part of his labour, the difficulty of which will be readily appreciated, he feels that the want of success cannot be attributed to any want of attention on his own part.

The collections of the other colleges, with two exceptions, were catalogued between 1844 and 1851.¹ The index was finished in April 1851, and the two volumes were published in 1852.

Coxe only produced one more catalogue, that of the Latin and Miscellaneous Laudian manuscripts (Quarto series, vol. iii)² begun in 1854 and published in 1858. He had hoped to follow it up by catalogues of the other older collections, but by that time Bandinel was seventy-nine, and most of the administrative work of the Library had devolved upon his Sub-Librarian. Bandinel resigned in 1860 and was succeeded by Coxe. The catalogues compiled by Coxe are not likely to be readily superseded, especially the catalogue of Greek manuscripts, which a very competent judge once pronounced to be probably 'the best library catalogue that we possess (den wir überhaupt besitzen)'.³

(iv) Alfred Hackman and William Dunn Macray

On the completion of the Catalogue of Printed Books in 1843 two other members of the staff were entrusted with catalogues of manuscripts, Alfred Hackman⁴ with a catalogue of the Tanner collection, and William Dunn Macray⁵ with a catalogue of the Rawlinson, a task which occupied him, with intervals, for the rest of his very long life. The details of progress until 1858 are not recorded, but little can have been done for some years, since it was almost at once decided to print a supplement to the Catalogue of Printed Books, which was published in 1851. In 1858

The manuscripts of Christ Church were catalogued by G. W. Kitchin (1867). The manuscripts of Pembroke College are uncatalogued in print, except for quite insufficient notices of some by H. T. Riley in Hist. MSS. Commission, Sixth Report (1877), App., pp. 550 f.

as we have already seen,¹ a public complaint was made of the lack of a catalogue of the Tanner and Rawlinson collections. In the answer to the complaint,² which appeared over the signature 'S.T.P.', the state of the catalogue was set out. From this statement we learn that the text of the Tanner catalogue had been printed and that the index was being prepared. Rapid progress was impossible with such a small staff. Between 1858 and 1860 Macray³ revised his catalogue of Rawlinson A for the press and catalogued Rawlinson B 250-414. In 1861-2 he catalogued Rawlinson B 415-520. The catalogue of Rawlinson A and B was published in 1862 (Quarto series, vol. v. 1). Hackman's catalogue of the Tanner collection was published in 1860 (Quarto series, vol. iv). An important part of this collection consists of letters, and Hackman took the opportunity of making brief but very useful calendar entries in the index. The main defect of the Catalogue is that little attention was paid to the history of the collection or to the provenance of particular volumes. As we have already seen, Coxe's catalogue of the Latin manuscripts in the Laudian collection was published in 1858. A catalogue of the Italian Manuscripts in the Canonici collection by Count Alessandro Mortara was published in 1864. It contains a preface in Italian by Dr. H. Wellesley, principal of New Inn Hall, on the Canonici collection as a whole.

After Coxe became Librarian, Macray was the only assistant engaged on the preparation of catalogues of Western manuscripts, and from 1871 he only worked half-time in the Library.⁴ In 1862 he revised the description of Rawlinson C. 1-392 for press. From 1863 to 1871 he was employed on the transcribed Catalogue of Printed Books, Coxe's new author catalogue. For a brief spell in 1869 he resumed work on Rawlinson C, cataloguing MSS. 393-410. Between 1871 and 1878 he catalogued Rawlinson C. 411-989, and made a combined index of Rawlinson A, B, and C. The Catalogue and index were published in 1878 (Quarto series, vol. v. 2).

At the Visitation of the Library in November 1878 it was decided to provide him with fresh work. Coxe wrote to the Vice-Chancellor (26 October 1878) suggesting that he [Macray] be employed in continuing the Cataloguing of the Latin MSS. commenced by myself some years ago. They are a class of works continually asked for, and the list (for it cannot be called more) contained in the old folio Catalogue of 1697 is wholly inadequate to give the Reader any just idea of their contents.

The Digby collection was chosen, which contains many short scientific tracts. These lay outside Macray's own field of interest, but it was a fortunate choice. It would have proved an extremely difficult collection to treat summarily, and when the interest of scholars in such literature was awakened during the present century a detailed catalogue was available. Macray was engaged on the catalogue for five years, and it was published in 1883 (Quarto series, vol. ix). After this he returned to the miscellaneous series of Rawlinson MSS., and between 1882 and 1900 catalogued and indexed Rawlinson D (published in three parts, 1893, 1898, 1900, Quarto series, vol. v. 3-5).

In 1865-6 Macray had, as extra work, indexed Black's Catalogue of the Ashmolean MSS. It was published in the latter year. In 1866-8 he compiled vol. ii¹ of the Calendar of Clarendon papers (published 1869), and from 1869 to 1875 vol. iii of the same calendar (published 1876).

The slow progress of cataloguing was due to lack of staff competent to catalogue manuscripts. In 1864 Coxe was required by the Curators to report on 'The Catalogues of the manuscripts at present going on—their cost—with the work remaining to be done'. He gave a list and suggested that it might be advisable to appoint a 'supernumerary assistant on the European MSS.', but nothing was done.

Again in 1875 the Curators called for 'a return of the number of manuscripts catalogued during the last ten years—by whom?—and at what cost?'² The answer to the first part of the question has already been given.³ The answer to the second is supplied by Macray. He was paid a total of £1,273. 10s. 6d. for work on cataloguing manuscripts 1858-75, an average of less than £80 a year. One new piece of work was undertaken as a result of this report, the calendaring of the Carte papers, which was entrusted to Edward Edwards, best remembered for his work in the movement for the foundation of public libraries. He finished it in 1883. It was originally intended that it should be printed, but it was found to require too much revision to make this practicable.¹

(v) Falconer Madan

In 1880 Falconer Madan was appointed Sub-Librarian. One of his earliest tasks was to draw up for the Curators a Report on the Manuscript Collections in the Bodleian Library, which was presented in July 1881. It is arranged in alphabetical order of collections under six headings: general contents, number of volumes, modes and date of acquisition, catalogue, hand-list, index. The compilation of this list gave him not only a knowledge of the collections, but brought home to him the considerable number of manuscripts which were neither hand-listed, catalogued nor indexed. From 1880 to 1889 he was engaged in a series of abortive catalogues of manuscripts,² first (1880-2) of MSS. Bodley in their present order, 1-110; then in 1884 of the same series in the order of the 1697 Catalogue, of which some 75 volumes were described; and from 1883 to 1889 of MSS. Add. A-E, i.e. the miscellaneous accessions from c. 1860, which was rather more than half finished. This last catalogue brought to light the now well-known collection of medieval Latin Verse (Add. A. 44), of which he sent a description to Léopold Delisle.³ From 1887 to 1889 he was also engaged on a catalogue of accessions referenced into the new classification. These unfinished catalogues contain the 'fuller descriptions' to which he occasionally refers in the Summary Catalogue.⁴ His only published Catalogue was the supplement to Coxe's Catalogue of the Laudian Latin manuscripts. The impression of wasted labour which the foregoing enumeration suggests is misleading. There was no one in the Library, nor indeed in the University, who could teach him palaeography.⁵

Coxe was dead, Macray's main centre of interest lay in the seventeenth century. Madan therefore had to teach himself something about manuscripts and was experimenting in different forms of cataloguing. His fuller descriptions were 'in the style adopted for the Additional MSS. of the British Museum',¹ a series of catalogues which began to appear in 1875. From 1885 he had also used a system of short cataloguing which was known as a 'descriptive hand-list', and which resembled the Summary Catalogue.

In 1890 there came the opportunity to make a fresh start. Madan had become convinced that the only hope of overtaking the arrears was to prepare a Summary Catalogue on the lines of the Inventaire Sommaire of Greek manuscripts in Paris by Henri Omont. In a note dated 14 January 1890, Madan wrote:

The idea of an Inventaire Sommaire is due to me. Since about August last I have been urging it on Clark and Mowat, and about 10 days ago Mowat asked Clark, after the former and I had been talking about it, in the Rawlinson room, if he would take up the matter. And Clark wrote to the Vice Chancellor a day or two ago and yesterday had an interview with the Libⁿ. Mowat and Jackson² are both keen about it. Clark asked me to draw up some heads of details as I have done.

Jackson had become aware of the deficiencies of the Catalogue as a result of his search for the 'Codex Dunelmensis' of Terence, i.e. the now well-known illustrated Terence from St. Albans,³ which was entered in the manuscript additions to the 1697 Catalogue, but not indexed.⁴ Clark was the Rev. Andrew Clark, Junior Proctor for the year 1889-90, and so, at the time, ex officio Curator of the Library. He was then engaged on his monumental edition of the works of Anthony Wood for the Oxford Historical Society, and in the attempt to identify the manuscript authorities used by Wood he had much occasion to discover the deficiencies of the Catalogue.¹ The letter of Clark referred to was written to the Vice-Chancellor on 9 January. In it Clark gave notice that he would move at the meeting of the Curators on 25 January

That a Summary be prepared giving the present and intermediate marks of all MSS. in the Catalogue of 1697 and carrying on the series so as to include all subsequent acquisitions, omitting in both cases those separately catalogued.

The motion was moved but Nicholson, who was then Librarian, put up a series of counter proposals, namely that the various unfinished catalogues on which Madan had been working for the last six years should be completed and printed. It was known that Nicholson was likely to be hostile to the suggestion of a summary, and in February T. W. Jackson organized a memorial to the Curators on the subject, which was signed by thirty-eight persons, including many of the most distinguished scholars in the University.² John Wordsworth, Bishop of Salisbury, wrote privately to the Librarian, commending the scheme. The Bodleian catalogues of manuscripts became momentarily a matter of notoriety in Oxford. An incident that had occurred the previous year was described in a number of the leading English journal devoted to classical studies, which was published in March 1890. It began as follows:³

Owing to the as yet unperfected arrangements for cataloguing MSS. at the Bodleian, this the most important MS. for the text of Jerome's Chronicle has till quite recently escaped notice. Two years ago, it seems, the Codex was by the mistake of an attendant brought to a German scholar⁴ instead of some other MS. which he wanted, and he seems to have been the first to draw attention to its nature. About a year afterwards the Librarian who had perceived at once on seeing the

² Among them are W. Oxon, i.e. William Stubbs, Bishop of Oxford, D. B. Monro, J. Earle, Robinson Ellis, A. S. Napier, H. Nettleship, H. Pelham, F. Pollock, J. Rhys, W. Sanday, J. O. Westwood, J. MS. that it was earlier than the 8th century, to which it had previously been ascribed, sent photographs of several pages to Mr. Maunde Thompson, who confirmed this opinion and said that it undoubtedly belonged to the early part of the 6th. A few months later than this Dr. Mommsen was in Oxford, and the Librarian thought that at last the hour was come, and the man to whom this important discovery might be revealed.¹ And so in this somewhat circuitous way it has been permitted to the Professor and Reader of Latin and to Oxford scholars generally to become aware of the existence of this MS. in their own Library.

The manuscript in question was the fifth-century copy of Jerome's translation of the Chronicle of Eusebius (MS. Auct. T. 11. 26 [20632]), which had been bought from the Meerman collection in 1824.²

At the next meeting of the Curators (8 March) Ingram Bywater proposed:

That a short list of the MSS. not yet described in the Quarto volumes of Catalogues be prepared and printed, the 'Inventaire Sommaire' of M. Omont at Paris to be taken as model.

The Librarian again put up counter proposals intended to show that the Quarto series of catalogues could be finished 'before the year 1902 brings the tercentenary of our opening'. On 9 April, the day before going out of office as proctor, Andrew Clark published his pamphlet in which he set forth full details of the state of the catalogues of manuscripts.

The next stage was the setting up of a committee 'to consider and report according to what method the Catalogues of the MSS. may be best completed in the shortest time without interfering with the ordinary work of the Library, and to frame estimates of the probable cost, if any extra expense is needful to be incurred'. Its members were the Regius Professor of Greek (B. Jowett), chairman, the Regius Professor of Divinity (W. Ince), the Dean of Christ Church (H. G. Liddell), the Regius Professor of Hebrew (S. R. Driver), the Senior Proctor (C. Plummer), and J. L. G. Mowat. Andrew Clark also attended. The Committee invited the Librarian, the two Sub-Librarians (F. Madan and A. Neubauer) and W. D. Macray to answer a series of questions about Bodleian catalogues of manuscripts, first about short cataloguing, secondly about the Quarto catalogue, thirdly about accessions, but they are too long to quote here.¹ Both Nicholson and Macray were strongly in favour of continuing the Quarto series. Nicholson wished to raise the standard of the Quarto catalogues and submitted an excellent detailed description of MS. Bodley 264 (The Alexander Romance) as a specimen.² Macray wrote that 'these catalogues once done are done in substance for all time'. Madan, on the other hand, declared that 'the Summary is a necessity, the Quarto Catalogues a luxury; with such large arrears as now exist it should be a secondary object'. The Committee adopted Madan's view, and made the following recommendations:

1. That a Summary Catalogue of the MSS. of the Bodleian Library, hitherto uncatalogued in Print on the Quarto System, be prepared without delay.
2. That it be constructed in the form proposed by Mr. Madan with such alterations as may be approved by the Committee after consultation with the Librarians.³
3. That during the progress of this Summary Catalogue, and until the Curators shall have given further orders, Mr. Madan discontinue his work on the Quarto Catalogue.
4. That the annual accessions of MSS. be catalogued for the present, and until the Curators shall otherwise order, according to the shorter method.
5. That the Summary Catalogue proceed by Collections in the order of their acquisition, beginning with those not printed in the Catalogue of 1697.
6. That the preparation of the Summary Catalogue be entrusted to Mr. Madan, and that he be released from so much of his present duties as may enable him to undertake this work.

These recommendations were accepted by the Curators on 7 June, with the change of 'Curators' for 'Committee' in clause 2.

It will be observed that the preparation of the Summary Cata- logue was entrusted to Madan, which came to be interpreted as meaning that he was responsible to a Committee of the Curators, not to the Librarian.¹ This explains a feature that has often occasioned remark, namely the bracketed notes in the text signed 'E.W.B.N.'² Nicholson had the scholar's dislike of leaving a problem unsolved and would have spent endless time over the details of date, provenance, and questions of text: Madan was convinced of the greater importance of overtaking the arrears of cataloguing and of producing a catalogue within as short a time as possible. He had a meticulous sense of time and knew that the only way to carry out the task allotted to him was to exercise the greatest self-restraint in research on a particular manuscript. There is no need to dwell further on the difficulties that arose from the want of harmony between Nicholson and Madan, both of whom served the Library with all their might.

As on other questions where his proposals were rejected, Nicholson's views had much to commend them. They were the views which found favour in other large European libraries at this time. The Vatican Library published the first volume of a full-scale catalogue in 1886, which was continued subsequently with still greater elaboration. The plan was undertaken after a thorough review of rival methods. Cardinal Ehrle had at one time favoured a summary.³ In 1893 Valentin Rose completed the first volume of a full-scale catalogue of the manuscripts in the Prussian State Library at Berlin. In 1891 was published the first volume of an elaborate classified catalogue of manuscripts in the Royal Library at Brussels by J. van der Gheyn. All these catalogues remain incomplete. Madan had on his side impressive examples of the summary method. Léopold Delisle had led the way by his Inventaires (1862-71) of the huge collections of manuscripts which came to the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris as a result of the French Revolution. The State (then Royal) Library at Munich followed suit (1868-81), as also did the State (then Imperial) Library at Vienna (1864 and later). Henri Omont had slightly enlarged the scheme for his Inventaire Sommaire of the Greek manuscripts at Paris; and in the great series of catalogues of the French departmental libraries, surely the most extensive piece of cataloguing ever undertaken and finished, the scheme was still further enlarged, though not to the extent of full cataloguing in Nicholson's sense. G. Mazzatinti and A. Sorbelli adopted a very summary scheme for their Inventari of Italian Libraries (1887, 1890 onwards). In England the British Museum stood by itself. It possessed eighteenth- and early nineteenth-century catalogues of almost all its older collections. Until the middle of the nineteenth century a very summary list of accessions was issued. From 1875 catalogues of additions appeared with admirable regularity, these aimed at putting 'as much information into the descriptions of manuscripts as was compatible with conciseness'.¹ One magnificent full-scale catalogue of an older collection, the Royal, has since appeared (1921). At Cambridge the Catalogues of M. R. James began to appear in 1895. They bear the stamp of individual genius, and are not strictly comparable to the institutional catalogues which we have been passing in review.

The first volume of the Summary Catalogue was published in 1895. It was numbered iii, and treated the larger collections acquired from 1697 to 1800. Vol. iv, containing descriptions of the larger collections acquired during the first half of the nineteenth century, appeared in 1897. Vol. v (published 1905) dealt with collections received during the second half of the nineteenth century (up to 1890) and with miscellaneous acquisitions from 1695 to 1890, and was published in 1905. Madan could write with justifiable pride in the preface:² 'For the first time since 1695 the entire collection of Western manuscripts in the Bodleian is catalogued in print and is indexed.' At the same time descriptions of accessions for each year since 1890 had been printed off as each was ready, and vol. vi, part I (covering the accessions of 1890-1905) was issued in 1906. Madan had indexed the manuscripts as he described them and hoped to print an index with each volume. This hope was not fulfilled. He was limited to an introduction in which the principal classes of manuscripts were passed in review, after the manner of the introductions to the Catalogue of Additions to the British Museum. Again in 1905 he proposed to print an index to vols. iii–vi (up to 1905) as part of vol. vi and vol. vii. Unfortunately on the proposal of T. W. Jackson, it was decided to postpone printing an index until vols. i and ii (comprising the manuscripts described in the 1697 Catalogue) had appeared.

After 1905 Madan's administrative duties as senior Sub-Librarian took up more and more of his time. In 1912 he succeeded Nicholson as Bodley's Librarian. The two remaining volumes of the Catalogue were worked over by other hands, and are on an ampler scale. This is therefore the appropriate place to insert the appreciation of Madan as cataloguer by his successor as Sub-Librarian, Sir Edmund Craster:¹

The Summary Catalogue was a very wonderful achievement. For twenty-two years Madan worked upon it, four or five hours every day. Very few men would have been capable of that effort, the unintermittent orderly presentation of precise detail day after day and year after year; but with most there would have come a brain fatigue, a slackening and dwindling of the stream of activity. It was not so with him. Without scamping, and resisting equally the more insidious temptation to over-elaborate, he was able to turn out volume after volume. There are singularly few errors in them; omissions are not many. Madan was well equipped, not merely by his industry, but by his qualities as a palaeographer and as a stylist. His palaeography was empirical, the result of handling thousands of manuscripts, but it was sound. Allowing for our individual biases, I never found my dating of a manuscript to differ from his. He was a good classic, and the style which he evolved for himself was admirably adapted for a catalogue; it was perfectly compact, and absolutely devoid of ambiguity.

The copy of the descriptions of Nos. 1–3490 of the 1697 Catalogue was sent to press in July 1910, and was finally published in 1922 as vol. ii, part 1. It was thoroughly revised in proof by Sir Edmund Craster and H. M. Bannister (temporary Sub-Librarian, 1917–18). The cataloguing of accessions from 1911 was continued by Craster to 1915, and a volume numbered vi, part 2 (covering accessions from 1905 to 1915) was published in 1924.² A draft of vol. ii, part 2 (covering Nos. 3491–8716 of the 1697 Catalogue) had been prepared by Madan, but progress on the revision of it for the press was slow until the appointment in November 1929 of N. Denholm-Young as special cataloguer, an appointment made possible by grants from Christ Church. This volume was published in 1937. In the preface will be found an account of the parts contributed by others.

² It was subsequently combined with vol. vi, part 1 to form a single volume.

The first and last volumes remained to be completed, but work on them was interrupted by the Second World War. The last volume, the index, was begun in 1947 by P. D. Record. It was sent to press in 1951 and is published at the same time as the present volume. Proposals were at one time put forward to incorporate in it the substance of the indexes of the volumes of the Quarto catalogues relating to Western manuscripts, but the varying scale and treatment of the material in the indexes to these volumes made the scheme impracticable. Of the first volume, the present, no more need be said.

In conclusion we may say a word about future tasks. Madan's statement in 1905¹ that all the manuscripts of the Bodleian were catalogued in print is, alas, no longer true. There is no printed catalogue of the considerable accessions since 1915. To fill this gap is clearly one of the most important tasks ahead. But a revision of the older Quarto catalogues, especially those containing medieval manuscripts, is also much needed.² In 1936 N. Denholm-Young (afterwards Keeper) proposed that this should be done by a series of class catalogues, describing the manuscripts that relate to a particular subject, such as law, medicine, and liturgies. A start was made in 1938 on manuscripts relating to civil and canon law by Dr. Hermann Kantorowicz, but was interrupted by the war and could not be resumed owing to the death of Dr. Kantorowicz. A catalogue of the Latin liturgical manuscripts is at present in progress. The other chief desideratum is a subject index such as that in the Manuscript Students' Room at the British Museum. How soon any of these schemes can be realized it would be idle to prophesy. The completion of any catalogue seems more subject to unforeseen obstacles than most scholarly undertakings.

APPENDIX

Abstract of the Answers returned to the Questions proposed to the Staff of the Bodleian Library by the Committee of the Curators appointed to consider the best mode of Cataloguing the MSS.

May 28, 1890

I. SHORT CATALOGUING

- I. 1. To give an example of the shortest title that would be sufficient for practical purposes.

‘P. Vergilius Maro: Aeneis. fol. pap. ff. 181. 15th c.’ (The Librarian.)

—but there are a number of reasons why so short a title is unsatisfactory.

‘MS. Lat. Class. d. 5. On paper, written about 1400–21 (last piece by Oddo Micolinus, 1421) in Italy, in a case $9\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ in.: 95 leaves. 1. Tibulli Elegiae (fol. 2): 2. Ovidii Amores (fol. 47): 3. Ovidii Heroidum Epistola xv^{ta}, Sappho Phaoni (fol. 77): 4. Priapeia (fol. 83). Italian Poems occur on foll. 75–6, 92–4. Purchased at the Babington Sale, 1889.’ (Mr. Madan.)

(i) ‘S. Augustini Opera varia.’ (Mr. Macray.)

(ii) ‘Laud 611–614. Four volumes of historical collections, by Sir G. Carew, relating to Ireland.’ (Mr. Macray.)

- I. 2. To state the actual time such a title takes to write.

Time unknown. (The Librarian.)

Twenty-five minutes for a MS. entirely uncatalogued:—or fifteen minutes for a MS. already partially described as in the Old Catalogue of 1697. This includes indexing but not printing. (Mr. Madan.)

Half an hour a volume for a printed Catalogue: a quarter of an hour for a mere index-title. (Mr. Macray.)

- I. 3. To state the principles on which such title is constructed.

To supply the wants of the non-resident scholar: and aid him by every means to identify or differentiate the particular MS.: the student of palaeography, of illuminations, of music, of bindings, of the history of libraries, will all demand different details: the staff desire information on the history and characteristics of each MS. (The Librarian.)

To give the minimum help which a scholar has a right to demand: by supplying a Student who has not as yet handled the volume with brief but precise information as to what he may expect to find. (Mr. Madan.)

To inform outsiders of contents, age, source, &c.: and readers in the library as to what MSS. there are. (Mr. Macray.)

I. 4. To give the Index-entries involved in such short title.

Vergilius Maro (P.): Aeneis. } (The Librarian.)
 Virgilius Maro (P.). See Vergilius. }

Babington, Churchill; Italian, language; Micolinus, Oddo; Ovidius Naso, Publius; Priapeia: Tibullus, Albius. (Mr. Madan.)

In the case of Augustini opera, the index should supply each separate title, and combine their references if there were several copies of the same tract.

In the case of Sir G. Carew's collections, 'Carew, Sir George,' and 'Ireland.' (Mr. Macray.)

I. 5. To give two typical examples of an entry from the Inventaire of M. Omont, one of an author, the other of a collection of papers.

(i) '255. Thucydidis de bello Peloponnesiaco libri VIII cum scholiis. XII s. Parch.

(ii) 685. Origenis fragmenta, x s. Parch. (2);—S. Joannis Theologi de Bibliis excerpta (7);—S. Joannis Damasceni de zodiaco excerpta (8);—Nomina mensium hebraicorum (8);—Fragmenta chronologica (9);—De Mitylene fragmentum (12);—Damasi papæ confessio catholicæ et apostolicæ fidei (12v^o);—Theodori Balsamonis oratio de presbyteris (13v^o);—Commentarius in Psalmos, a Myna scr. (15).—XVI–XIX s. Pap.'

On an average M. Omont gives eight lines to two MSS., the two preceding entries take nine lines. (The Librarian.)

(i) '1126. Barlaami et Joasaphi historia, auctore Joanne S. Sabæ monacho (2);—Lectioes ex Actis apostolorum, initio et fine mutilæ (154). xiii s[iècle]. Parch. 160 fol. (Colbert 4190), P[etit format].'

(ii) '3090. Excerpta varia e SS. Athanasio, Gregorio Nazianzeno, Basilio, Joanne Chrysostomo, Cyrillo Alexandrino, Proclo, Augustino, Tito Bostrensi, lat. (1)—Regulæ monachorum a Johanne Cassiano conscriptæ (29^v); e codd. Florentinis.—63 fol. xvii s. Pap. 39 vol. (cf. Suppl. Gr. 1075. P).' (Mr. Madan.)

I. 6. To give two typical examples of an entry from the Inventaire of M. Delisle, one of an author, the other of a collection of papers.

- (i) '18468. (Séguier.) Plaidoyers de M. Le Maistre, avocat en Parlement.—xvii^e s.
- (ii) 926. L'esguillon d'amour divine, par frère Bonne Adventure.—Horologe de sapience par frère Jehan de Souhaube, traduit par un cordelier (fol. 113).—Proposition de Gerson pour la réformation du royaume en 1405 (fol. 279).—Le chapel des trois fleurs de lis, en vers (fol. 317).—Bonne doctrine pour devotes fames (fol. 327).—Volume fait en 1406 par les soins de Symon de Courcy, cordelier, pour Marie de Berry (fol. iv^o). Le copiste s'appelait P. de la Croix (fol. 110 v^o et 334). Peintures. Au fol. 335, signature de Jehanne de Bourbon.' (The Librarian.)
- (i) '8907. Traités de Saint Hilaire.—Saint Ambroise, contre les Ariens (298).—Gestes des év. d'Aquilée (336).—vii s. Écriture onciale.'
- (ii) '9239-9241. Collection de 95 pièces, la plupart scellées, tirées des archives de la maison de Grignan. xiii-xvii s.' (Mr. Madan.)
- (i) '12,222. Aug. contra Faustum. xii s. Peint.'
- (ii) '12,658-12,704. Recueil de pièces sur l'histoire de divers monastères bénédictins, formé au xvii^e et au xviii^e s. et intitulé Monasticon benedictinum.' The names of all the monasteries follow. (Mr. Macray.)

I. 7. To give two typical examples of the method at present employed in the Library, and denoted by the phrase 'catalogued shortly'—one of an author, the other of a collection of papers.

No such system now exists. The nearest approach to it was in the case of entries in the hand-lists of Topographical MSS., e.g.

- (i) 'MSS. Top. Oxon. d. 14. Bliss's Extracts for a new ed. of Wood's Ath. Oxon.'
- (ii) 'MSS. Top. Oxon. d. 18. Papers relating to the Local League, 1886—.' (The Librarian.)
- (i) 'MS. Top. Oxon. e. 41. Letters from Oxford, 1790-94 (in verse), possibly by John Skinner of Trin. Coll., Oxford.'
- (ii) 'MS. Top. Gen. e. 49. Architectural drawings and notes in London, Oxford, &c., by R. C. Hussey, 1827-30.' (Mr. Madan.)

I. 8. To compare the principles adopted in 'short cataloguing' at present used in the Library, with the principles adopted by the compilers of the above-mentioned Inventories.

The 'short-cataloguing' just described, which was in use for the Topographical MSS. up to March, 1890, would rank below M. Delisle's, but it would be useless for the purposes of a Summary. There was, however, before 1885 a system of short-cataloguing in use for the Additional MSS. which was known as a 'descriptive hand-list'; and this resembled the proposed Summary. (Mr. Madan.)

For a comparison of the different principles involved in the several modes of summarily cataloguing, the attention of the members of the Committee is called to the 'Comparison of Systems,' prepared by Mr. Madan, which accompanies this Report.

- I. 9. To estimate how long it would take one person to make such a Summary (as is indicated in No. 1), working 6 hours a day, and 250 days a year.

There are no data for such a calculation; but it could not be done properly in 6 years. (The Librarian.)

Seven years, at the rate of 5 MSS. per diem. (Dr. Neubauer.)

Of the 9000 uncatalogued MSS. 6000 would take

25 minutes each, or 150,000 minutes, or 2500 hours, that is $1\frac{2}{3}$ years.

3000 would take 15 minutes each, or 45,000 minutes, or 750 hours, that is $\frac{1}{2}$ year.

This is for cataloguing and indexing Total $2\frac{1}{6}$ years.

Supposing revision and printing to take in addition $\frac{5}{6}$ year.

The whole might be done in 3 years.

But 6 hours a day is more than any one man could do; $4\frac{1}{2}$ hours is as much as he could be expected to do. (Mr. Madan.)

Six hours a day is too much to expect; 5 hours a day is as much as one man could do. (Mr. Macray.)

- I. 10. To estimate the cost of such a Summary.

£400 a year if done by a Sub-librarian alone.

£300 a year if by a Sub-librarian and assistant jointly. (The Librarian.)

£350 or £400 a year for 3 years; or in all, from £1050 to £1200.

This does not include the cost of printing. (Mr. Madan.)

II. THE QUARTO CATALOGUE

- II. 1. To express an opinion as to whether the Quarto system of cataloguing should be extended to all the MSS. in the Library, or confined to certain select MSS.

Extended to all: uniformity of treatment in cataloguing being essential in a large library. (The Librarian.)

Extended to all: leaving ample discretion to the cataloguer. (Dr. Neubauer.)

Confined to select MSS.: unless discretion is allowed to the cataloguer to treat summarily legal deeds, accounts, and collections of papers, the system should not be extended to all the MSS. It would be absurd to apply it to the 450 volumes of Churchwardens' Presentments for the Diocese of Oxford, or to the New College Deeds. (Mr. Madan.)

Extended to all: no class of MSS. is without its special interest: the catalogues once done are done for all time; and should the MSS. which they describe perish (as in the Cottonian fire), their main features would still be known. (Mr. Macray.)

II. 2. To say whether the Quarto system, if continued, should proceed by Collections or by Subjects.

By collections:

- (a) Cataloguing by subjects would involve cataloguing all the MSS. before any subject could be known to be complete.
- (b) Cataloguing by languages is easier than cataloguing by subjects; this has been already done, and yet experience shows there have been omissions.
- (c) A composite MS. would have to be split up under several catalogues.
- (d) A MS. in any collection ought to be capable of being referred to directly, without first discovering how it has been classified.
- (e) Scattering the MSS. of a great collection over many catalogues lessens the honour to past donors, and holds out less inducement for future donations.
- (f) MSS. relating to cognate subjects might be catalogued in the same volume.

Most of the recent MS. accessions have been referenced by languages, under some of which there are subdivisions by subjects; so that the quarto series might be continued in whatever way was thought to be practically most useful. (The Librarian.)

By collections: in order to go to press as soon as possible. If done by subjects, all the MSS. must be described before printing begins. (Dr. Neubauer.)

By subjects: its elaborateness being better suited to bring out the distinctive differences between the members of a class, than for application to all classes indiscriminately, e.g. the student of Liturgies would prefer to see all Liturgies minutely described together, than to have to search for them in many separate volumes, made at different times, by different and not necessarily specialistic hands. As a matter of fact, most of the queries addressed by readers to the staff relate to subjects and not to collections. If done by subjects, the work would probably be better done, as a specialist would probably be employed in each subject. (Mr. Madan.)

By collections: classification by subjects would involve

- (a) much preliminary expenditure of time;
- (b) the separation of volumes;
- (c) the debates which arise as to the classification of printed books;
- (d) incompleteness, arising from incomplete knowledge of the contents of the MSS. (Mr. Macray.)

II. 3. To make any suggestion as to the Quarto Catalogue.

The cataloguers are not to go out of their way to publish anecdotes, or to give interesting extracts. If a work has been printed, it is seldom necessary to quote the beginning and end of it. Measurement by inches is not necessarily so practically useful as designation by the old folio, quarto, octavo sizes; nor is it always necessary to describe the binding, or estimate its date. But these last 3 points are debatable. It would be an improvement

- (a) If an asterisk were prefixed to MSS. of works known to be printed;
- (b) To prefix to the detailed description of the MS. a short title and approximate date in thick type. (Cf. The written description by the Librarian of MS. Bodl. 264.) (The Librarian.)

The Catalogue should state whether the printed text agrees with the MSS. or not, and a general index will be required in order to avoid consulting nine or ten indexes. (Dr. Neubauer.)

The Summary is a necessity, the Quarto Catalogue a luxury: with such large arrears as now exist it should be a secondary object. (Mr. Madan.)

Its form might be assimilated to that of the British Museum Catalogue of Accessions, which is about as full as, but more economical (and less handsome) than, ours. (Mr. Macray.)

II. 4. To estimate how long it would take one person to complete the Catalogue, working 250 days a year, and 6 hours a day.

Nineteen and a half years. (The Librarian.)

About 12 years, exclusive of indexing and carrying through the press. (Dr. Neubauer.)

One MS. takes $3\frac{1}{4}$ hours including indexing, but not revising. 9000 MSS. at $3\frac{1}{4}$ hours = 29250 hours, which, divided by 1500 (6×250), gives $19\frac{1}{2}$ years: or allowing for revision and taking through the press, about 21 years. (Mr. Madan.)

Thirty-six years. The Digby Catalogue, containing 241 MSS.,

took from Nov. 13, 1878, to Jan. 29, 1881—or 262 days of 5 hours each: indexing 30 days more, and miscellaneous work 30 days more: in all 322 days. 250 MSS. could be done in 250 days of 5 hours each: if the days were of 6 hours it would include index as well. (Mr. Macray.)

- II. 5. To estimate the cost of the completion of the Quarto Catalogue.
 Over £8000, if done by a Sub-librarian.
 About £6000, if done by a Sub-librarian and assistant. (The Librarian.)
 About £15,000. (Mr. Macray.)

III. THE ACCESSIONS

- III. 1. To say what the accessions amount to yearly.
 109 Western MSS. (excluding charters and rolls) and 109 Oriental MSS. (The Librarian.)
 About 100 a year, counting Western MSS. only, judging from the Printed Report for eight years up to the end of 1889. (Mr. Madan.)
- III. 2. To say how the accessions are now actually treated.
 All except charters and rolls are entered in hand-lists, and all except those and Oriental MSS. are fully catalogued by Mr. Madan. (The Librarian.)
 A short title is given in the hand-list; and the detailed description is given in manuscript, according to the method of the Quarto Catalogue. (Dr. Neubauer.)
 They are at present catalogued on the Quarto system. (Mr. Madan.)
- III. 3. To say whether it is necessary that the accessions should all be treated on the full Quarto scale.
 Yes. (The Librarian.)
 They should be catalogued as they come in on a Summary system, and wait until the Quarto Catalogue naturally overtakes them. (Mr. Madan.)
 Possibly not. (Mr. Macray.)

Additions to Omont's system are printed in italics.

N.B. The Description and Contents are as short as possible. The History could be dispensed with, but in view of the heterogeneous sources from which modern collections are drawn, to know the libraries and owners to which a MS. has belonged is often a key to its significance and importance. In the Bodleian it is also especially desirable to have a list of the old pressmarks, by which volumes are so often referred to by scholars of past centuries. And to tabulate this information takes a very short time when the volume is actually in hand.

C. [EXTRACT FROM STATEMENT OF
W. D. MACRAY]

I venture, in conclusion, to illustrate the two methods of cataloguing by examples from MSS. which I have myself described at full length within the last two months.

Rawlinson D. 788: 'Paper. fol. Household expenses 1648-59, 1684-9.'

This would be the kind of entry in a short summary catalogue: for no names are mentioned in the volume. But careful examination proved that the earlier entries were made by the wife of Richard Keble, Commissioner of the Great Seal under Cromwell, and the later by one of his sons. The short entry, with index-slip, would have taken about a quarter of an hour; my description occupied half a day.

Rawlinson D. 775-785: 'Paper. fol. Eleven vols. of the pay-books of the King's Surveyor of Works, 1532-43.'

This short entry, involving examination of dates, would probably have occupied one hour. My description gives 79 entries of the various places repaired, or prepared for visits of the King, Queen, or Princess. And the careful examination, leaf by leaf, brought to light a fragment of a leaf which I found to have nothing to do with these volumes, but to belong to Gough MS. Kent 25, where the remainder of the leaf was preserved. These eleven volumes, with their many index-slips, occupied six days.

Rawl. D. 787: 'Paper. fol. A volume of miscellaneous theological and historical collections by Rev. John Lewis of Margate.'

An entry like this would give no idea of the varied contents of any one of Lewis' numerous volumes. In this volume there are 26 distinct articles, some of which are of great interest, which, with the index-slips, occupied $2\frac{1}{2}$ days. And one result was that Lewis was found to be the author of an anonymous printed tract, of which hitherto the authorship had remained unknown, and which was entered under the heading of its subject in our catalogue of printed books.

CONSPECTUS OF SHELF-MARKS OF WESTERN MANUSCRIPTS

I. CURRENT SHELF-MARKS IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER OF COLLECTIONS

The shelf-mark is given in heavy type, followed by the number accorded by the Summary Catalogue in curves. (R) after the shelf-mark denotes Roll, (P) Papyrus or kept between glass.

LIST OF MANUSCRIPTS ACQUIRED, 1600-95,

IN ORDER OF ACQUISITION

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

THE basis of the following list is the Register of Benefactors, in which books presented or purchased out of gifts of money were entered under the names of the donors. The books are arranged in the order given in that volume. It is not always easy to identify manuscripts from the brief descriptions of the Register, but it is possible to distinguish most of the doubtful cases from the evidence of early catalogues and shelf-lists. A question mark has been added after the name of the donor where there seemed to be real doubt. A few books in the Register have not been identified or are lost. For these the exact titles given in it have been reproduced. For others I have devised a short title as best I could. All manuscripts are written in Latin except where otherwise specified. Oriental manuscripts are included, but only the language is specified. It seemed worth while to include them thus briefly in order to give a balanced view of the growth of the manuscript collections in the seventeenth century.

The Register of Benefactors is far from a complete record of the accessions of the seventeenth century.¹ Even in the period before the Civil War when it was more carefully kept up than in the latter part of the century it is incomplete. Sir Thomas Bodley would only have considerable gifts entered. For single volumes it was normally enough, in his view, if the donor's name was written in the book itself. Writing to Thomas James in 1606 he says:²

It were well that you would sette down D. Kinges name, upon the bookes or booke that he hath given: which is the course I have taken, in all single gifte bookes, unless they were of special value. Upon all other single bookes I have don it myself.

This is a clear statement, which in the main agrees with the evidence of the inscriptions in the books. Inscriptions in the hand of Sir Thomas Bodley are found in 18 manuscripts, all gifts in ones or twos. They are written in his ordinary hand without any attempt at extra formality. To take an instance, in no. 669 is 'Donum Guil. Camden alias Clarentieux'. This was a single gift that came later than the volumes he had presented in 1601 (nos. 15-18), which are duly entered in the Register of Benefactors, and contain no inscription. The magnificent twelfth-century lectern bible (nos. 162-3) given by George Rives, Warden of New College, when he was Vice-Chancellor, in 1602, was regarded as of special value and was entered in the Register. There is no inscription of gift in either of its two volumes. The formula 'Donum' followed by the name of the donor is Bodley's commonest use.¹ Unfortunately he never added a date.

When Bodley says that 'upon all other single bookes I have don it myself', he is of course referring to manuscripts which came through his hands. Even so it is not quite true. In the next sentence of the letter he goes on to mention the gift of 'Mr Clement Edmundes his Cabala in Hebrewe'. This is no. 561 and it bears an Ex dono inscription with date which is in an unidentified hand. There were other gifts which came straight to the Library. Nine volumes received between 1610 and 1616 carry inscriptions in the hand of Thomas James.² They are gifts of one or two manuscripts. James always gave a full date and used a more elaborate form than Bodley, for example 'D[ono] D[edit] Jana Owena Bibliothecae publicae Oxoniensi amoris ergo 1610 28^o Apr.' In the gift of John King, Dean of Christ Church and Vice-Chancellor, a handsome copy of Gower's Confessio amantis, which is the subject of Bodley's comment in the letter we have quoted, James did not write the inscription himself, but appears to have employed a professional scrivener. The same practice was followed in 1620 when Dr. Robert Master restored to the Library one of the manuscripts given to the University by Humphrey, duke of Gloucester (no. 943).

A certain number of donors provided inscriptions of gift themselves, notably Thomas Allen and Sir Robert Cotton. Allen himself wrote 'Tho: Allen D[ono] D[edit]', usually at the top of the first leaf. Cotton's inscription is more elaborate, and takes the form of a votive altar on which is written in capitals:³

GENIO LOCI
BODLEIO RESTIT:
BONO PUBLICO
ROBERT: COTTON
CONNINGTO: HIC
LL. M. D.D.

A few of the inscriptions on single gifts were also inscribed by their owners, e.g. the elaborate inscription which Richard Connock put in a ² Nos. 611, 612, 706, 814, 816, 817, 819, 834, 879.

³ The words 'votiva ara' are written above the altar in Cotton's own hand, but the lettering, which is not skilful, is perhaps by another hand.

Book of Hours formerly belonging to Q. Mary, 'a monument worthie to be kept not for the Religion it contains, but for the Pictures and the former Royall owners sake' (no. 818).¹ Another curious inscription, presumably in the hand of the donor, Sir William Waad, is in phonetic spelling (no. 238). On one volume (no. 646) 'The gifte of the La: Brokett' is stamped in gold on the cover. Another, which is known to have come direct to James, has a printed label (no. 602). There are finally a number of manuscripts where the evidence at present is not enough to show who wrote the inscription.²

There are nearly 150 manuscripts acquired during the life-time of Sir Thomas Bodley for which no donor's name is recorded. Some of them are among the great treasures of the Library, such as the Alexander Romance (no. 443), the illustrated Bestiary (no. 442), and the illustrated Apocalypse (no. 860). It is very unlikely, in view of the careful measures taken to record gifts, that the names of donors of such books should simply have been forgotten. It is surely more probable that these and most of the others were gifts of Bodley himself.³ We get glimpses in his letters to James of possible purchases, as for instance, 'I am promised to see some MS of Bacon, which I will either buy or refuse'.⁴ Further among the books bought with gifts of money manuscripts were occasionally included. An instance is the copy of the Gospels in Old English, used for the edition of 1571, which was purchased together with 29 printed books out of £20 given by Herbert Westphaling, bishop of Hereford (no. 3). It is probable that James, who was specially interested in manuscripts, encouraged Bodley, and himself took an active part in finding such purchases. In one of his letters Bodley writes to him:⁵ 'I pray you send me the several prices of those two MS of Mr Buckley which you doe value at 12^{sh}. bothe together'. James continued to buy manuscripts after Bodley's death. In the memorandum book,⁶ which he kept up most fully for the years 1613, 1614, there are entries of three manuscripts bought with printed books (nos. 808-9, 815) and an entry 'MSS. varii 4s. 2d.' at the end of a list of octavo books bought at London from John Edwards.⁷ This might cover a dozen or more volumes. For the years between Bodley's death and James's retirement (1613-20) nearly 100 manuscripts were acquired for which no donors' names are recorded. Again the probable inference is that the majority were purchases. The acquisition of manuscripts (apart from the great donations due to Archbishop Laud) dropped sharply during Rous's tenure of office. The one considerable later series of manuscripts unaccounted for (nos. 3003-47) consists almost entirely of manuscripts borrowed by James and never returned to their owners.

In spite of the general probability that the majority of the volumes we have been discussing were purchases, it is unfortunately never safe to assume that this is true of any given volume. The records kept were good, but they were not perfect. For instance, as far as Library Records go, the only evidence of the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter is the list in the Register of Benefactors, yet there are eleven other volumes (see below, p. 83), of which the Exeter provenance can be proved from the Exeter Catalogue of 1507 or otherwise, which are not in this list. All but two of these appear in some Library list by 1604. The probability is that they came with the donation of 1602 and were by some accident separated from it.

The methods of recording gifts started by Bodley and James continued to be used by their successors. There was some slackness when Rous grew old and infirm. The gift of Dr Thomas Clayton in 1647 (nos. 2913-9) is only recorded in Langbaine's note-books. Barlow was meticulous in writing inscriptions of gift in volumes with his own hand. Hyde's period of office is notable for purchases and for gifts of considerable size, but, in the main, care was taken to inscribe small gifts with their donors' names. The deficiencies of the Register of Benefactors at this period can be supplemented by other evidence.

LISTS OF LAUDIAN MANUSCRIPTS WITH YEAR-DATES

IN the foregoing table the great collection of manuscripts given by Archbishop Laud was compressed into a single entry (nos. 1658–2898), although it arrived in four separate gifts, with a supplement, between 1635 and c. 1641.¹ Such compression is permissible in view of the expanded tables for the collection which follow. With a very few exceptions all Laudian manuscripts have entered at the bottom of the first page of the text or, in some cases, on the flyleaf, the following inscription:

Liber Guilielmi Laud Archiepiscopi Cantuariensis et Cancellarii Oxoniensis.

This inscription is nearly always followed by a date, ranging between 1633 and 1641. The dates later than 1633 are clearly those at which Laud acquired the manuscripts.² To take an illustration from the Greek manuscripts:

MSS. of the 1st donation (May 1635) are dated	1633, 1634, 1635.
„ „ 2nd „ (June 1636) „	1635, 1636.
„ „ 3rd „ (June 1639) „	1636, 1637, 1638.
„ „ 4th „ (Nov. 1640) „	1639, 1640.

For the second donation we have confirmation in Laud's own words that the manuscripts were 'all bought within the year past'.³ The year 1633 was that in which Laud became archbishop of Canterbury. In September of that year he moved from Fulham to Lambeth, and it is probable that inscriptions with the date 1633 were entered about this time, and should be taken as meaning 'acquired in or before 1633'.

The four donations were separately listed, but the manuscripts themselves were not marked to show which donation they belonged to. When Gerard Langbaine drew up his concordance tables, identifying the manuscripts with those in the lists, he made a few mistakes, because the significance of the year-dates had already been forgotten. Thus 'Officiorum divinatorum liber, 4to' in the third donation he identified as the present Misc. 329, which bears the date 1640. This identification is impossible, since the third donation arrived in 1639. But there is a book with exactly the same title in the fourth donation, which Langbaine identified with the present Misc. 382, bearing the date 1637. If these two books change places, all difficulty vanishes. It has been possible to correct some of these wrong identifications, but there remain six, two western and four oriental, correct identification of which has not been possible. These are marked with an asterisk in both tables, and in Table I are placed under the donation to which they seem to belong by date. Two Laudian manuscripts which reached the Library with the Hatton collection are marked with a dagger.

In the first table the manuscripts of each donation are arranged by year-date and language within each donation. In the second table they are listed in order of current shelf-mark followed by the year-date and the number of the donation in curves. The whole of the Laudian collection, both oriental as well as western, has been included, for if one wishes to learn the sources of the collection, a knowledge of the year-dates is important, and they cannot be found in full in the catalogues so far published. The current shelf-marks have been taken as a basis for the lists, since they are the ones used in the Quarto catalogues. The Summary Catalogue numbers of the western manuscripts may be found by turning to the tables at pp. 25-8 above.

¹ This manuscript is no. 1369 in the table above, p. 107, where it is entered as the gift of G. Vivian on the evidence of the Register of Benefactors. In S.C. II. ii, p. 26, it is said to be non-Laudian, but it has the genuine Laudian inscription and is identifiable in the list of the manuscripts of the first donation. A possible solution of the difficulty is that Vivian gave the manuscript to Laud for the Library.

SUPPLEMENTARY TABLE OF OBSOLETE LAUDIAN SHELF-MARKS

When the Auctarium was formed in 1789, and a selection of Laudian manuscripts, those now known as Laud gr. and lat., removed to it,¹ the gaps left in the seventeenth-century numeration were filled up by transferring to them manuscripts from the latter part of the series, viz. G, H, I, K, L. K and L were wholly transferred, G, H, I only partially. A few other minor changes were also introduced. This arrangement was broken up c. 1825, when the Oriental manuscripts were made into a separate series, and the remainder of the collection renumbered as Laud misc. Although it lasted such a short time, the intermediate arrangement is still liable to cause confusion, firstly because printed labels bearing these shelf-marks were affixed to the volumes, many of which still survive, and secondly because they found their way into print, e.g. in the new edition of Dugdale's Monasticon (1817-30).²

In the following table, which should have appeared at p. 55 above, the intermediate shelf-mark is placed first, followed by the seventeenth-century shelf-mark in curves. The latter is the one printed in the second column in S.C. II. i, pp. 19-60, and from it the Summary Catalogue number can be found.
